G. M. Strikes In U. S. Urged By Mayor of Canada City

Two Ontario Ministers Resign, Assail Labor Policy of Hepburn.

Oshawa Official Gives Ultimatum

Advice to Employes to Quit Union Threatened in Wire to Martin.

On the Labor Front.

Sympathy strikes in United States plants to support the General Motors walkout in Canada were demanded by the Mayor of Oshawa as two cabinet members who defended the Oshawa union resigned.

Police used tear gas to remove sit-down strikers from a Detroit plant. Several were injured in the rioting that followed.

The C. I. O. was granted a wage-and-hour contract by one of the largest textile manufacturing firms as its organization drive moved forward in that field.—Page 7.

U. S. Strikes Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Oshawa, Ontario, April 14.—The General Motors strike here developed tonight a demand for sympathy strikes in United States plants and forced the resignation of two Ontario cabinet ministers who defended the Oshawa union.

Labor Minister David Croll resigned at the demand of Premier Mitchell Hepburn, who is opposing the John L. Lewis labor organization. Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck also resigned at Hepburn's request.

Mayor Alex Hall issued the demand that strikes be called in General Motors' United States plants to demonstrate loyalty of the labor organization to 3,700 union members on strike here.

Denies Communist Charge.

He termed his demand an ultimatum to test the value of international union organization. United States workers must strike by Monday or Oshawa workers will be advised to abandon the union and return to work, Hall proclaimed.

The strike was called last Thursday by the United Automobile Workers of America, affiliate of the C. I. O. General Motors had refused to negotiate with C. I. O. representatives.

Hepburn charged Lewis sought to become dictator of Canadian industry and that the C. I. O. had communist affiliations.

Croll assailed this contention today and defended the Oshawa strikers for "acting within their rights as citizens of Canada and the Empire."

His letter avowed that Premier Hepburn "quarreled with the right of these workers (at Oshawa) to join the union of their choice."

"You based your attack upon a conviction that the C. I. O. should not be permitted to invade Canada when you must have known that agreements had already been signed by the C. I. O. with the Coulter Manufacturing Co., of Oshawa, and the Goodrich Tire Co., of Kitchener.

Wires to Martin.

"Indeed, there are today and have been for many months some 10,000 workers in the Province of Ontario who are members of unions affiliated with the C. I. O.

"Certainly I have never heard until you made it any suggestion of an alliance between the Lewis unions and the Communists."

Croll wrote that his resignation was forthcoming because "I have

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

After a 30-minute struggle, sheriff's deputies evicted 150 sit-down strikers, mostly women, a number of whom were garbed in men's clothing, from the Yale & Towne factory, where a strike has been in progress.

Many Employes Injured in Fight at Chrysler Supply Firm Plant.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 14.—After a half-hour battle of tear gas and lead weights, more than 300 policemen and sheriff's deputies arrested 150 sit-down strikers—mostly women—at the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co. plant here today.

Three men were taken to Receiving Hospital afterward and one of them, George Sissage, was treated for a broken arm. The others had lacerations. Later they were returned to the Wayne County Jail.

None of the contsables was injured seriously, although several strikers were cut on the hands and face in the fighting.

Aided by Nonemployes.

Police Supt. Fred W. Frahm said the strikers, supported by the United Automobile Workers Union, were aided by about 45 men not employed at the factory, which makes locks for Chrysler divisions. Many of these men wore U. A. W. A. buttons.

Officers forced the surrender of the strikers, who have been defying a circuit court injunction since 9 a. m. Monday, by throwing tear gas bombs into the building.

Police took 11 patrol wagon loads of strikers and others who resisted the raid to the Wayne County Jail.

Court Order Read.

Led by Bernard E. McGrath, chief deputy sheriff, the officers went to the factory about 3:30 p. m. and McGrath read a court order for evacuation of the plant.

Frahm, who stood nearby, shouted:

"Let's not have any fighting. We don't want to hurt anyone."

Strike leaders retired to take a vote and announced a few minutes later: "We're going to stick."

The battle started at once. Some strikers caught a few tear gas bombs and threw them back at police. One exploded in a group of officers.

Battering down doors, deputies made their way through all entrances and filled the building. Women on the second floor threw pellets at the officers.

Union leaders asserted officials of the company have refused to meet with employes since the strike started March 9 and have disregarded the Wagner labor relations act.

One striker who was subdued by clubbing after having escaped a barrage of tear gas. Bruised heads and hand lacerations were the chief injuries.

D. C. Tax Setup To Be Studied In Income Hunt

By James D. Secrest.

Abandoning a plan to employ special counsel, a sub-committee of the House District Committee yesterday decided to conduct a thorough investigation into the District taxation system in its search for revenue to offset an anticipated deficit of $6,000,000 in the 1938 District supply bill.

The question of what agency should appoint investigators for the sub-committee has for several weeks been a source of contention between the House District Committee and the Collins sub-committee on appropriations.

Members of the District sub-committee agreed not to seek any revenue over and above the amount needed to balance the budget on the ground that any surplus might encourage extravagance. At the same time they decided that the nine Collins tax bills, which would raise approximately $12,000,000,

Latest Traffic Control Plan Is Submitted Here

Pamphlet Designed to Cut Highway Toll Given D. C. Authorities.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

An outline of new methods in traffic control and highway accident reduction was presented in pamphlet form to District authorities yesterday by the safety division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Northwestern University Traffic Safety Institute.

Incorporating safety and accident investigation systems developed by Lieut. Franklin M. Kremel, of the Evanston, Ill., police department, who will soon visit Washington as a guest of The Post, the traffic pamphlet stresses the importance of trained agents in safety work.

Accident investigation, the book points out, has a dual purpose. First, to secure basic data on the primary causes of highway crashes, and second, to apprehend and punish law violators if an infraction or regulations is found.

Describing law violations and their relation to accidents, the pamphlet says:

"Illegal driving practices may be divided into two categories—those which actually result in accidents and those, while potentially dangerous, do not result in accidents. In cities which do not employ modern methods of accident investigation, only the second group of violations

Old U. of M. Tower Goes to War, Sold for $1,000 as Scrap Iron

Five years ago University of Maryland officials sought to rid the campus of the 120-foot water tower which for a quarter of a century has been the center of a freshman class tradition. They were told it would cost $400 to tear it down.

Yesterday work was begun on the dismantling. The university has sold it for $1,000.

The answer is that the world armament race has so increased the price of scrap iron that the old tank became a saleable asset. It will be cut into pieces and shipped abroad for conversion into war materials.

The 60,000-gallon tower was erected in 1904 and supplied the university buildings with water until 1926 when the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission incorporated the College Park institution in its jurisdiction.

The tower possesses a sentimental value for alumni, because of the tradition that arose about 1910.

It was then the custom began for each freshman class to raise its flag on the top of the tower. This was a signal for the sophomores to send up a raiding party, usually under cover of darkness, to tear the "frosh" banner down.

The story is told that in 1913 a sophomore by the name of Robert McCutcheon, of Braddock Heights, western Maryland, stood at the bottom of the tower and shot the halyard of the freshman insignia squarely in half.

Love Slayer Hangs With 'Hello, Gang' As Farewell Jest

Moundsville, W. Va., April 14 (AP). Frank Pramesa, 26-year-old miner, nervous but jesting, died tonight on West Virginia's gallows for the shotgun slaying last July 15 of his neighbor, Louis Thames.

The slaying was attributed to a love affair between Pramesa and Thames' wife, which both admitted.

The miner walked up the gallows' steps unassisted. A curtain shielded him from the 44 witnesses and prison officials. He parted the curtain, peeked through the opening and said: "Hello, gang." Then the trap was sprung.

Duce, Hitler Blocking Off Reds in East

Freedom to Act in Spain Goal; Attacks Continue on Paris, British.

Baldwin Cabinet Given Vote of Confidence in Bitter Clash.

The Situation Abroad.

Premier Mussolini of Italy and Adolf Hitler of Germany were reported working to build an anti-Communist wall on their eastern fronts in order to give them freedom to act on the Spanish war. Attacks on France and Britain continued in the Italian press.

The British cabinet won a vote of confidence on its policy of refusing to smash the Spanish rebel blockade of Bilbao following bitter opposition charges in the House of Commons the nation was "running up the white flag."—Page 7.

New Charges Fly.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 14.—Italian newspapers followed jibes at Great Britain's navy today with new charges that France had dispatched Algerian troops to aid the Spanish government.

The Fascist writer, Virginio Gayda, declared in Il Giornale d'Italia that 250 Algerian militiamen left Tangier March 7 with Spanish passports, landed at Marseille and then went to the Spanish government front.

"Betwen March 17 and March 18 there also left for French ports and Spain another 1,000 combatants," Gayda asserted.

"Pretense" Laid to Britain.

The semiofficial Fascist organ, Il Regime Fascista of Cremona, which often expresses Il Duce's viewpoint, yesterday attacked Great Britain as "competing with France and Russia" to supply Spanish government forces.

England, the paper charged, "pretended" to resolve maritime freedom by refusing to grant protection to her merchantmen in Spanish waters off the insurgent-blockaded north Spanish coast.

The article urged insurgents "to have no nervousness, then, in launching torpedoes and sinking enemy ships."

While the newspaper jibed at Britain's navy as one which "can no longer defend he rships," informed quarters asserted Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of German are working hand in hand to build an anti-communist wall on their eastern fronts in order to give them freedom to face Spanish war problems.

Shells Rake Heart of Madrid.

Madrid, April 14 (AP).—Insurgent artillery pumped shells into the heart of Madrid today as the capital's defenders strove to blow attackers out of trenches with dynamite.

The sixth anniversary of the establishment of the Spanish Republic found projectiles exploding along the streets where Alcala Zamora, who became president, had traveled to proclaim the birth of the new government.

Gen. Jose Miaja's troops in the University City suburb on the northwestern fringe of Madrid subjected the clinical hospital and other insurgent positions to heavy artillery fire.

Quick Pair Averts Passenger Wreck As Freight Derails

Quickness on the part of Joseph Blanks, fireman, and John Warwick, first brakeman, on a Southern "red ball" freight prevented possible loss of life when 15 cars of the freight train were derailed at Burke Station, 14 miles south of Alexandria, Va., last night.

When what officials said was some sort of defect in one of the front wheels of a car derailed the freight, Blanks and Warwick raced down the track and set torpedoes to warn a speeding, southbound passenger express, carrying hundreds of men and women.

The limited was 3 minutes behind schedule, officials said, otherwise it might have piled on the tangled freight cars.

Harlan County, Ky., Trio Tells Liberties Group Story of 'Terror.'

By the Associated Press.

Three drawling Kentucky mountaineers testified at a Senate inquiry yesterday that an official of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association had paid them to "blow up" a union organizer with 15 sticks of dynamite.

While each denied he actually had touched off the charge, Chris Patterson, Larkin Baker and Richard C. Tackett readily acknowledged they had plotted the dynamiting in November, 1933.

They told the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee Ben Unthank, chief deputy for the association, had paid them from $30 to $100 each for the job.

Their intended victim, 72-year-old Lawrence Dwyer, United Mine Workers organizer, testified the blast ripped away the wall of his room in the Parrott Hotel, Pineville, Ky., "and slammed me against the ceiling." Except for a few scratches, he was not injured.

Twisting his gnarled hands nervously on the witness table, Dwyer related a long history of terrorism which he said the Harlan County coal operators had employed successfully to suppress all labor organizations.

The silvery-haired union official—who told reporters he had "a

'Get Lynchers,' Sumners' Plea In House Fight

Appeal to Mississippi Made as Boland Says Bill Will Pass Today.

By Russell Smith.

A leading Southern member of Congress appealed yesterday to a Southern governor to bring "to speedy and adequate punishment" the lynchers of two colored men so that the latter's state may "escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact."

Remarkable for its denunciation of participants and officers alike in the Duck Hill, Miss., lynching of Tuesday, is plea was made by Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, to Gov. Hugh White of Mississippi.

It came as Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip of the House, said "we will stay in session" until the Gavagan anti-lynching bill is passed today.

"There is no question about passage of the bill," Boland added. Questioned as to probability of efforts by Southern members to delay a vote, he agreed that such efforts are likely.

Southern Hopes Weakened.

Previously, some indication had been given of a filibuster against the bill, to the extent permitted by the rigid House rules, when Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, one of its opponents, had objected to unanimous consent for an 11 a. m. convention of the House.

Hopes of Southern members that they would be able to defeat the measure admittedly were weakened when news of the Duck Hill lynching was received here. In his telegram to Gov. White, Sumners said that "it makes it hard for us" to fight the bill successfully.

His telegram was as follows:

"Appreciate your telegram. Impression created here by the Duck Hill lynchings is that if the press reports are even approximately correct, and they seem to be, these lynchings both with regard to lynchers and the officers involved were as dastardly a crime as cowardice can devise and brutality execute."

"Can't Escape Reflection."

"It is this sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the States. It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the States to govern.

"As one Southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the State of Mississippi can not escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact can not escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact, unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

The Gavagan bill will be taken up again by the House today shortly after it convenes. Three hours of debate remain before the measure is opened to amendment under rules permitting five minutes debate upon such amendments.

President Gives Western World Friendly Pledge

Delivers Surprise Speech After Pan-American Union Address.

In a surprise extemporaneous speech following a formal address to South American diplomats gathered to observe Pan-American Day, President Roosevelt yesterday at the Pan American Union pledged the friendship of the United States for its sister republics of the Western Hemisphere.

"At Buenos Aires," he said, after making sure that microphones were deadened, "we proclaimed to the world a series of vitally indispensable relationships repudiated by many countries. We have kept them alive when other parts of the world are drifting toward a political Niagara.

"Now we have sought to establish a timely example to citizens who inhabit other countries. Each family should have friends among its neighbors. The same applies to nations."

President Extemporizes.

The President cited as an example of promises kept by the United States, this country's strict hands-off policy in Cuba's recent political strife.

Speaking after he had concluded his formal address, the President remained standing on the rostrum while diplomats from 21 countries waited in surprise in their high-backed Dominican mahogany chairs, in a chamber decorated with gold brocade and historic friezes.

He then launched vigorously into an unprepared talk, which was timed to prove that a new policy of nonintervention in Latin-American affairs was the avowed policy of the United States since he had taken office. He listed the results of that policy to date, and concluded by assuring the assemblage of ambassadors and ministers that the friendship and integrity of the United States can be relied upon.

Pupils Participate.

From his mention of European war preparations and the strong desire for peace in the Americas, some of the diplomats present deduced that the Chief Executive was hinting at a possible coalition of American republics in the event of a European conflagration.

Washington school children joined with the President and Secretary of State Hull in celebrating the day in a variety of picturesque ceremonies. At a luncheon yesterday noon Mr. Hull warned of war, saying "We look abroad and see chaotic conditions in political and economic fields. We see strife and a runaway race in armaments. We have sought to check this almost uncontrolled drift toward international chaos and anarchy • • • and move toward peace."

Mr. Roosevelt began his broadcast address by commenting on the "boon of peace" which the Americas enjoy, to a gathering of colorful diplomats in the vast main chamber of the Union Building. This speech was broadcast here and sent by short wave to South America. Mentioning a previous gathering four years ago, he said "We

All of Tidal Basin Cherry Trees Doomed By Jefferson Memorial Commission Plans

By Gerald G. Gross.

Though the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission continued to guard closely its detailed plans for remodeling the Tidal Basin, it was learned definitely yesterday that the annual cherry blossom display is doomed in its entirety if the commission-approved scheme is carried out.

Simultaneously Representative Otha D. Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, introduced in the House a resolution which would suspend the commission's activities until it has held a competition for the architectural award under supervision of the American Institute of Architects.

"It is imperative," Wearin told his colleagues on the floor, "that the United States Congress prevent the desecration of the memory of Jefferson by requiring the selection of the design for his memorial to be made a result of an architectural competition."

Herewith is the fourth in a series of articles discussing the controversy raging over plans to build a memorial to Thomas Jefferson at the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park which would have greater bulk than the Lincoln Memorial and result in removal of most, if not all, of the Japanese cherry trees.

While thousands of residents and visitors yesterday admired the blossom exhibition, which may be the last of its kind, it was learned that the Jefferson commission's plans, prepared by John Russell Pope, would wipe out every one of the 723 cherry trees which now fringe the Potomac Park basin.

Even if provision were made for a minor display, the advanced age of the majority of the trees would block the success of such a charitable gesture, it was pointed out.

A total of 515 of the specimens are original stock, a quarter-century old and from 8 to 14 inches in diameter. Successful transplanting of such mature trees is practically impossible, experts declared. The 208 younger trees probably would live in new locations, they said.

'Little NRA' Bill Revived With Support Of Roosevelt

National Textile Body Is Proposed

Congress and Labor.

Influential members of Congress moved to regulate working conditions by key industries, reviving the long-dormant Ellenbogen textile bill for a "little NRA" in that industry, in wake of Wagner act rulings.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said agriculture, as a result of the Wagner decision, is the only major group unable to bargain collectively, and urged farmers to redouble efforts for the President's court plan.—Page 3.

'Textile NRA.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Under impetus of Wagner Labor act decisions, Congressional laborites moved yesterday to regulate working conditions by key industries—reviving the long-pending Ellenbogen bill to establish a "little NRA" in the textile business.

While Administration leaders pondered legality of general wage and hour legislation, a House labor sub-committee ordered hearings next week on the textile measures setting up a "National Textile Commission" to supervise labor conditions in the industry.

Two Courses Cited.

It was said in a responsible quarter that the White House gave a qualified "go ahead, but slow" signal on the bill even before Supreme Court validation of the Wagner labor relations act.

Although no word since has been received from the President, one House labor spokesman said the bill is being moved forward on the theory that two courses lie open—an approach by individual industries as in the Guffey-Vinson coal act, or a blanket attempt to regulate wages and hours.

The latter course is still in some legal doubt, although Monday's labor decisions are being studied closely for cues.

May Affect Steel, Autos.

Chairman William P. Connery of the House Labor Committee said general legislation may be justified on the ground that industrial disputes have been held a barrier to interstate commerce. He said general legislation could be justified on the theory that low wages and long hours are the primary cause of disputes.

Connery said it may be found feasible to proceed first by individual industries, following the trend of the Guffey coal legislation. If this course is followed through, he suggested that measures affecting industries such as steel and automobiles eventually might be considered.

Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the sub-committee considering the Ellenbogen textile bill, said he will send letters to manufacturing associations and labor groups affected by the legislation, inclosing copies of the bill.

Sees Favorable Report.

Although extensive hearings were held last session, he said further hearings are planned. Keller disclosed that minor modifications already have been agreed upon, and a revised committee draft may be printed.

Where the original Ellenbogen bill would have fixed minimum wages in the industry at $18 a week, and maximum hours at 35, Keller said he favored giving the proposed textile commission authority to prescribe maximum hours and minimum wages, after hearings and determination of fact. He predicted the legislation will be reported favorably this session both by the sub-committee and the full House Labor Committee.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis, moving figure in the Committee for Indus-

By Sidney Olson.

Two members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet called for "no compromise" in the President's court reorganization program last night, as talk of compromise gained strength on Capitol Hill.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said "from the standpoint of farmers, the Wagner act decisions have made enactment of the President's plan more imperative than ever before."

Attorney General Homer Cummings said:

"Four members of the Supreme Court still stand as a battalion of death against all major social legislation—State and national.

"It is not a wholesome situation when an Administration, under a mandate to carry out a progressive program, must face a court of nine, with four votes lost to it in advance. The margin is too narrow and the risk is too great."

Unfavorable Report Seen.

Meanwhile an opposition leader boldly predicted the court bill would be reported out unfavorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee by a vote of 10 to 8. He claimed the vote of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, for the opposition. The committee tentatively has been divided, 9 to 9.

O'Mahoney at once denied he is other than noncommittal on the court plan. "I insist on my right to be noncommittal in this matter," he said. "However, a compromise could well be effected."

The opposition leader who made the claim added that "if the President would back a compromise, say, of two justices on the Supreme Court instead of six, coupled with a constitutional amendment, the plan would carry the Senate tomorrow in a breeze."

Every Senator interviewed on the measure since Monday's Wagner act decisions of the Supreme Court, with the exception only of Chairman Henry F. Ashurst of the Judiciary Committee, has expressed the view that a compromise proposal would carry swiftly, while insistence on the full six-justice plan would bring not only a last-ditch battle, but an uncomfortably close vote on the floor.

Senator Ashurst has pleaded for "a clean victory or a clean defeat, but no compromise."

Six Are for Plan.

In favor of the President's plan are six members: Chairman Ashurst, Arizona; Matthew Neely, West Virginia; William H. Dieterich, Illinois; M. M. Logan, Kentucky; Key Pittman, Nevada, all Democrats, and George F. Norris, Nebraska, Independent Republican.

Avowedly noncommittal are five members: Senators Pat McCarran, Nevada; Carl A. Hatch, New Mexico; George McGill, Kansas; James H. Hughes, Delaware, and O'Mahoney, Wyoming, all Democrats.

McGill however, has acted with Dieterich in the role of questioner for the Administration, and is held to be for the plan by every one but himself.

Of those definitely for the President's plan, Senator Logan and Norris are known at least to favor a compromise, if one they regard as sound can be effected. It is believed several of the opposition, despite a "no compromise" attitude, would submerge this feeling in an effort to end the long struggle before damage is done to Democratic solidarity.

The sixth week of the court plan hearings in the committee saw a struggle between Senators Burke and McGill over admission into the record of nine letters from presidents of New England universities, all opposing the court reorganization bill.

Burke presented the letters with the statement that their use in the record would obviate summoning the university heads as witnesses, and would thus tie into plans to close the hearings Saturday.

McGill questioned validity of this argument on the grounds that "we all can load up this record with thousands of letters if we want to." He insisted he would vote for the motion of Senator Hughes to close hearings in executive session Saturday. Burke then threatened to demand further hearings until "50 more witnesses against the plan" are heard.

Burke added Administration leaders had told him John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, may yet be called as witness for the bill. Lewis later told reporters he would be "glad" to testify, and added "adoption of the President's plan is more imperative than ever before because the instability of the Supreme Court is so obvious and its idiosyncrasies are so great."

Politics and People

Labor Must Guard Its New Victory Lest Power Given Congress Becomes a Detriment.

By Franklyn Waltman

LABOR'S triumph as a result of the Supreme Court's decision upholding constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations act—and it was a great triumph for labor — may turn out to be a Pyrrhic victory in the years to come unless leaders of organized labor in this country possess the ability and do become industrial statesmen instead of being union agitators and professional walking delegates.

WALTMAN.

Thinking friends of the organized labor movement already have come to the sobering realization, in their jubilation over the Wagner decisions, that the power which the Supreme Court in these opinions recognizes as resting in Congress cuts both ways—it can be used against labor as well as in behalf of labor. And the way it is used depends chiefly on the manner in which John L. Lewis, William Green and their satellites conduct themselves.

It is unthinkable at the present time that Congress would undertake repressive measures against labor. But this is a rapidly changing world, with swift swings of the pendulum. Men in power today will not always be here. Others may come who have a dislike and distrust of democratic processes—men who gained power as a result of the excesses of labor. If that happens—then labor had better be vigilant of its liberties.

The possibilities inherent in this situation were accurately described by President Roosevelt in his message opening Congress a year ago when he said that "we have built up new instruments of public power" and added that "in the hands of a people's government this power is wholesome and proper; but in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people—give them their way and they will take the course of every autocracy of the past—power for themselves, enslavement for the public." No better description could be uttered of the possibilities which may flow from the Wagner labor act decisions.

As long as the Supreme Court kept the hands of Congress off relationships between employers and workers in industry, that tribunal stood as a bulwark against the abuses of which the President spoke, just as it prevented the wholesome effects of which he also spoke. Whether the latter is worth the risk of the former is to be demonstrated. At all events, that is the reason why Jefferson and his disciples down through the years have fought against a strongly centralized government.

Now the Supreme Court, in essence, has ruled that it is the business of Congress to take whatever steps it regards as wise and necessary to prevent any occurrence in the relations between workers and employers in a large part of the Nation's industry from burdening or becoming an obstacle to interstate commerce. In the Jones & Laughlin opinion, the majority of the Supreme Court indorsed the merit as well as the legality of purposes of the Wagner act.

This purpose is set forth in the act as the policy "to eliminate the causes of certain substantial obstructions to the free flow of commerce and to mitigate and eliminate these obstructions when they have occurred by encouraging the practice and procedure of collective bargaining and by protecting the exercise by workers of full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of their employment or other mutual aid or protection."

The act specifically asserts that "nothing in this act shall be construed so as to interfere with or impede or diminish in any way the right to strike." The purpose, however, is to eliminate frequent causes for strikes. It is the strike of workers or its threat which bears down on and obstructs interstate commerce.

Under the Supreme Court decision, it seems to many, the power of Congress is sufficiently broad for the drafting of legislation which would go directly to the heart of an obstruction to interstate commerce—legislation which would make it unlawful for workers to strike. Since that is the evil, a case can be made out for rooting it out.

Of course, Congress would not baldly undertake to forbid industrial strikes. Legislation with that end in view would provide for a process of compulsory mediation, with a prohibition against striking pending the outcome, as is now the law for railroad workers. A further step might be a process of compulsory arbitration by boards equitably chosen, with a prohibition on strikes.

Such proposals have been made and have been given impetus by the Supreme Court decision. There is much to be said for such undertakings, just as it has now become the duty of Congress to make illegal the "sit-down" strike in industries which affect the flow of interstate commerce. Such a prohibition has nothing to do with the right to strike since it would be aimed solely at preventing the seizure of industrial property by workers. The right would remain unimpaired.

But if Congress can do these things, can it not also, if it desires and the sentiment of the country is agreeable, outlaw all strikes? Since the right to strike is the greatest weapon labor has, would not labor then be worse off than it is now? And finally, would not such possible eventualities be the beginning of Fascism? Might not labor then say in the words of King Pyrrhus of Epirus: "One more such victory over the Romans and we are utterly undone?"

From all of this it does not follow for one minute that the Wagner act should have been declared unconstitutional. The Supreme Court took a realistic view of an effort—not otherwise possible—to bring about industrial peace through reasonable collective bargaining. The court took cognizance of contentions that the act was one-sided and failed to place responsibility on labor, but held that was none of its business.

Let it be remembered that the chief reason why the country is enthusiastic over the Wagner act—whereas a few years ago it was indifferent or hostile to collective bargaining—in disgust for the stupid and arrogant conduct of industrialists in dealing with labor. Such excesses of capital as have recently been revealed have driven the middle-class man and woman to the side of labor.

Excesses on the part of labor will drive that decisive block of middle-class voters back to the side of capital. John L. Lewis, for one, had better get in step with what has happened, and seek a new orientation of his viewpoint.

It may be an injustice to Mr. Lewis, but the statement which he issued commenting on the Supreme Court decision contained a distinctly sour note and created the suspicion that he likes discord and fighting and would have been pleased had the court struck down this measure for the promotion of industrial peace. Certainly, the court deprived him of his best argument for fomenting strikes. A labor statesman would have been thinking of the responsibilities which the court decision had placed on him, instead of expressing chagrin that he had lost one of his talking points for strikes.

Lewis Refuses To Say Sit-Ins Will Be Ended

By William V. Nessly.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, refused to say yesterday that the C. I. O. would abandon the sit-down strike method, despite Supreme Court validation of the Wagner labor relations act.

The labor chieftain, at a press conference, had just remarked that recent sit-downs were "obviously a protest of workers who could not get the rights granted by the Wagner act," when he was asked whether his powerful organization would drop that weapon.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that," he replied.

Lewis said the proposal of Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to ban sit-downs was "totally unnecessary," and said the Senate-approved resolution condemning that type of strikes, company unions and industrial espionage "admirably straddled the situation."

Lewis, Guffey Confer.

Earlier in the afternoon Lewis and Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, had conferred with President Roosevelt for 45 minutes on general labor topics, but with particular reference to putting the new Guffey-Vinson coal stabilization into effect. Signing of the act, they said, would be held up a couple of days by a typographical error in the conference report on the measure.

Lewis declared Premier Hepburn, of Ontario, bitter foe of the C. I. O., is "unduly exercised" over the General Motors strike in Canada. He declared the premier has "used up a lot of conversation in a perfectly irrational manner" and ridiculed the charge of communism hurled by the premier.

"If there are any Communists among the strikers," Lewis said, "they were first employed by the corporation and were passed through its personnel manager. The corporations select the members of the union." He added that all of the C. I. O. unions have many members in Canada.

C. I. O. Drives Praised.

The C. I. O. drives are meeting with rapid success, Lewis declared. Contracts numbering 54 now have been concluded with steel companies employing 330,000 men, in the shoe industry 23 closed-shop contracts have been obtained, with 13 wage increases, and the United Shoe Workers have reached a membership of 30,000, he told reporters.

Applications for certificates of affiliation with the C. I. O. have been received from more than 300 local unions, central bodies and one or two State bodies, he said, and charters are to be sent out immediately. He referred especially to the decision of aluminum workers to join with the C. I. O., some 50,000 men being involved.

Asked whether the organization will seek a closed shop in the automobile industry, he said he felt that all beneficiaries of the union activities should belong to the union.

"In the fullness of time," he added, the union will call for recognition by Henry Ford and validation of the Wagner act will help the workers obtain it, he declared. Reminded that Ford had said his employes are free to join a union, Lewis replied:

"That makes it unanimous."

Asked whether, in view of the Wager act decision, any effort would be made to add labor clauses to the Guffey coal act, he said he and his associates were so eager to get the act in operation that amendments would not be attempted at once.

Despite the recent conclusion of a new contract for the bituminous coal industry in the basic Appalachian region, he said, 40,000 miners still are "locked out" in other regions by failure of operators to accept the terms in the basic agreement. Miners in the Alabama, southern Appalachian, Hazard and Virginia fields are affected.

Lewis said he was not familiar with the agenda of the conference called by Secretary of Labor Perkins for next Monday to work out with representatives of labor, employers and Government, methods of collective bargaining made mandatory on the employers by the Wagner act. He added, however, that he would attend and give all the help he could. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and rival of Lewis for leadership of American labor, also has been invited to the conference.

Lewis took occasion to praise the "great courage and great resourcefulness of the Secretary of Labor in her efforts to settle the General Motors and Chrysler automobile strikes.

House Passes Railway Rate Clause Repeal

By the Associated Press.

The House passed yesterday for the second time in two years the Pettengill bill, designed to give the nation's railroads greater leeway in making rates to compete with water and truck carriers for long distance traffic.

The measure would repeal the long and short haul clause of the interstate commerce act, which prohibits railroads from charging lower rates for a long haul than for a shorter one on the same route in the same direction.

The vote was 268 to 120. Last session the House passed the measure by a vote of 215 to 41, but the Senate did not act. Now the legislation goes to the Senate again.

Passage came after nearly four hours' debate, in which proponents contended the measure would place the railroads on an equality with water and truck carriers, which are not governed by the clause.

Opponents argued it would give the railroads power to destroy the Nation's merchant marine and truck lines, and to hike rates to intermediate, noncompetitive points to make up losses from rate wars.

The House struck down, 112 to 96, a substitute proposal by Representative Cole (Democrat), Maryland, to repeal only the so-called "equidistance" portion of the clause, which permits identical rates for two or more railroads competing between two points It also voted down a half-dozen other amendments designed to change rate-making procedure under the present law.

Mexico City, April 14 (AP).—Part of the floor of the National Cathedral caved in today during the consecration of the new Archbishop of Mexico, precipitating about 100 persons into a pit ten feet deep.

Blind Man Faces Homeless Future With Faithful Dog

Because he owns a faithful police dog which leads him safely through Washington's busy streets, blind John M. Davis was faced yesterday with the prospect of having no home.

For the past five years he has lived at 1123 Seventeenth street northwest, but now his landlord wants to take over the entire building.

No other landlord, however, he says, will tolerate the dog. A few days ago he sent an appeal to President Roosevelt who forwarded it to the District Commissioners. They, in turn forwarded it to Elwood Street, chairman of the Board of Welfare, who thus far has been unable to solve the problem.

Davis was blinded by a munitions factory explosion during the World War, and later lost his savings in the crash of the Park Savings Bank. He is supported by a sister who works for the State Department.

W. & J. SLOANE 32nd Anniversary

A Declaration of Principle And a Demonstration of Fact

Birthdays should be gala days. They find us richer in experience, riper in judgment, and strongly entrenched in those ideals which, for a third of a century now, have distinguished the Washington House of W. & J. Sloane for Home Furnishings.

To achieve the top-most in production one is apt to run the risk of creating a false impression of price. That we don't traffic in mediocre merchandise is no reason for believing us to be high priced. In point of fact THE REVERSE IS SIGNALLY TRUE. When you hear prices quoted lower than at Sloane's you will be perfectly safe in assuming that the merchandise lacks that integrity of construction which gives it true value; is deficient in that charm of design which the masters themselves have made immortal.

It is guided by such inspiration that our Company of Mastercraftsmen have fallen rightful heirs to their place, carrying on with the same fidelity in design and the same uncompromising belief that FINE FURNITURE can ONLY be made of FINE MATERIALS.

So we are celebrating our 32nd Anniversary with a demonstration of the meaningfulness of the Sloane Slogan:

Wallace Spurs Farmers' Fight To Alter Court

Wagner Rules Add to Peril, He Warns After Talk With Roosevelt.

Urging farmers to "redouble their support of the President's plan for judiciary reform," Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday said the Supreme Court's Wagner act decisions leave agriculture "exposed to severe legal inequality."

In his statement, made shortly after a conference with President Roosevelt at which the latter, the Secretary indicated, indorsed his views, Wallace referred caustically to Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts.

"The fate of farm legislation now apparently is in the hands of one justice who wrote that agriculture is a local matter and outside of effective Federal help," he said. "Agriculture cannot afford to be subjected indefinitely to the uncertainty of shifting judicial interpretations of the Constitution."

"Still Legally Local."

"Business has long had the right to act nationally through the corporate form of organization," he said of the farmer's present plight. "In the Wagner case decisions, labor has now won a similar right. But by decisions of the Supreme Court in the Hoosac Mills case affecting the AAA, agriculture is still legally a local problem.

"The decision that agriculture is a local matter discriminates against the farmers and blocks their progress. The reasoning of the court majority in that case was in direct contrast of the reasoning of the majority in the Wagner cases.

"In the latter, the court recognized that the employment of labor affects Interstate Commerce in the meaning of the Constitution. But in the A. A. A. the court completely ignored the fact that farm prices and production in one State affect farm prices and production in other States.

"The court has said in effect that the farmers cannot co-operate with each other and with their government to protect their incomes and their prices.

Disadvantage Seen.

"In the past, the troubles of agriculture have been largely due to the fact that farmers working on 6,000,000 farms scattered over 48 States, were unable to bargain on a basis of equality with the groups that were well organized.

"With big business having the right and the ability to operate through large scale units, and labor given needed protection by the Government in its effort to organize, what is going to happen to the farmers?

"I want to make it clear that I am for the decision in the Wagner cases. But I want to make it equally clear that from the standpoint of the farmers, these decisions have made enactment of the President's plan of judiciary reform more imperative than ever before. If there were any doubts that the farmers' real interests lay in supporting the President's judiciary plan, all such doubts have been removed by the court's desions in the Wagner cases.

"Depend on One Member.

"In the Wagner decisions, the court has faced some of the realities of the present day. But is that any guarantee that the present court will reverse itself in the case of agriculture? With four justices flatly hostile to vitally needed legislation and the court's decisions now seeming to depend on the variable opinions of a single member, how can anybody tell what future decisions may be?

"A year ago, following the AAA decision, the court seemed to be guided by a more enlightened interpretation of the onstitution when it uphed the TVA act. But a few weeks later the court reverted to narrower views when it invalidated the Guffey act and the New York minimum wage law."

New Dealers Not Included On U. S. Chamber Address List

Wallace Will Be Honor Guest at Banquet, But Won't Speak; President Declines Bid Due to Pressure of Official Business.

For the first time since the birth of the New Deal, neither President Roosevelt nor any member of his Cabinet is on the program to address the convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, opening April 26 and continuing four days.

Strained relations between the Administration and the national chamber, marked by harsh attacks on Government policies and sharp Administration replies at previous conventions have reached the point, apparently, where Administration participation will be extremely limited.

The President was invited to address the convention, but sent back word that press of business would prevent. Previously it had been announced that the President expected to spend the last week in April and the first week in May on his fishing trip to the Gulf off Texas and no change in these plans have been made public. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is listed as guest of honor at the banquet of the American section of the International Chamber of Commerce on the night of April 26, but is not on the program for an address.

The previous four chamber conventions since the Roosevelt Administration took office have recorded an interesting development in relations between officialdom and business.

In office only a few weeks, President Roosevelt spoke at the 1933 convention in the midst of the depression, calling on business to provide graduated wage increases to keep pace with living costs, and pledged Federal co-operation in trade agreements to eliminate cutthroat competitive practices in business.

A year later so much opposition had developed in business circles to the Administration policies that the convention opened with a barrage of most intense criticism directed at governmental activities. So heated was the attack by business leaders that the President replied in a message to the convention, warning against those who arouse "false fears."

Speeches at the opening sessions of the 1935 convention indicated that business leaders were even farther from agreement with Administration policies than they had been before.

No message of greeting was sent to the convention by the President and chamber officials said he had not been pressed to send one.

Milk Price Slash Believed Unlikely

Little possibility of a milk price reduction May 1 was seen yesterday by B. B. Derrick, secretary of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Associatoin.

Derrick declared higher feed, equipment and labor prices probably would keep the cost of milk up to 14 cents for "at least a year."

Last fall, when the retail milk price was increased from 13 to 14 cents a quart, Derrick promised a return to the old price in May if economic conditions then were the same as those in May, 1936.

Trotzky Uncertain Of His Following

Mexico City, April 14 (AP).—Leon Trotsky, once powerful leader in Soviet Russia, somewhat plaintively told a commission of Liberals today he does not know how much support he still has in that country.

"There are some sympathizers, I suppose," he said.

The commission is conducting an unofficial "trial" of the famous exile on charges of treason and wrecking brought out against Trotsky in the two treason trials in Moscow last summer and in January.

Seaman Shot, Beat Former Cell-Mate With Hammer, Witness Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., April 14 (AP).—A story of a man being shot and then, more than an hour later, beaten over the head until he was dead, by Violet Marryman from the witness stand today in the murder trial of Laban B. Howard, charged with the slaying, last August, of Edward N. Hawkins in a lonely cabin in Chesterfield County.

The State has charged that Howard, a former tugboat captain, killed his friend because he "talked too much." The two were former cellmates in prison. The witness said she and Howard, who had been living in the cabin for several months, had invited Shelton Howard, the defendant's son, and Hawkins to spend the week-end with them.

It was 1:15 a. m., she related, when a shout from Howard awakened her.

"He cried, 'What in the hell are you mumbling about,' and then he grabbed the flashlight and ran over to Hawkins' bed."

The witness said she tried to run between them, but that Howard armed himself with a pistol he kept beneath his pillow, and "shoved me back toward our own bed and fired twice."

Then in spite of the pleadings of the wounded man, the witness related, Howard refused to get a doctor and sat for more than an hour and a quarter.

"Finally Howard went to a tool box and took a hammer out of it," she continued.

Carried Body Away.

Violet said then she heard a dull thud and a moan. There were several more thuds, she said, but no more moans.

"He wrapped the body in a blanket and he and his son put it in the rumble seat of his car, which stood at the door.

"He ordered me to get dressed and the three of us drove over to a place near Petersburg off the main highway and they threw the body out."

She and Howard left the cabin in September, she said. She lived with him until February 9, until he was picked up by Richmond detectives.

The 28-year-old redheaded woman, so small that her patent leather toetips barely touched the floor, commanded absolute silence from the packed courtroom.

Cross-examination by defense counsel failed to shake the story told by the smartly clad witness. Repeatedly, Percy Smith sought to link her in motive with the crime, but she told virtually the same story she had told as the Commonwealth's witness.

Strong objection was noted by the defense at a question by the court. Judge Cox asked the woman what type of business Howard was engaged in when she lived with him.

"He was a robber. He cracked safes," she replied.

Smith leaped to his feet and noted an exception. He asked the court that the jury be discharged. Judge Cox overruled the motion.

She said in cross-examination, however, her love for the captain had died within two months after she began living with him. But she was afraid to leave him. She said she kept quiet about the slaying until March because Howard had threatened to kill her.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

In honor of Pan American Day, the Pan American Union presents Bidu Sayao, Brazilian soprano, as soloist in a concert of Latin American music by the United Service Orchestra under the consecutive direction of Lieut. Charles Benter, Capt. Taylor Branson and Capt. Thomas F. Darcy.

Making her first appearance in Washington since her debut at the Metropolitan Opera, Mme. Bidu Sayao rewarded the diplomatically distinguished audience at the Pan American Union last evening with some excellent singing. Her clear and supple voice was agreeably displayed in both lyric and dramatic selections, and was equally enjoyable in either type of expression.

One is indebted to her for acquaintance with two unfamiliar arias from operas by her countryman, Carlos Gomes, whose field of popularity was Italy in the latter half of the nineteenth century. Having heard them and appreciated their rhetorical and musical values, one wonders why they should not be added to the repertoires of recitalists in place of hackneyed items. "Come serenamente" from "Lo Schiavo" is as good as anything in "La Gioconda," and "C'era una volte un principe" from "Il Guarani" is a good rival for the jewel song in "Faust."

For her first group on the program, Mme. Sayao intoned the popular "Estrellita' of Manuel Ponce, in company with "Cancion del Carretero" by Lopez Buchardo of Argentina, and "Mi Nina" by Garme Guetary of Cuba. In a later group she offered three Brazilian songs of charming quality: "Canto da Saudade" by Alberto Costa, "A Casinha Pequenina" by Hernani Braga, and "Cantiga" by Barroso Netto.

The United Service Orchestra paraded compositions from Honduras, Brazil, Haiti, Colombia, Argentina, Chile, Mexico, Peru and Cuba. The opening number was an internationally minded march, "Panamericana," by Ignacio Galeano, which was followed by a pompous symphonic poem about Prometheus by Leopoldo Miguez. There was a lively rhumba by Justin Elie, a melodious "Elegia" by Luis Calvo, and Gilardo Gilardi's "Noviando."

Interesting for the use of native Indian themes and rhythms was a dance from the opera, "Huemac" by Pascual de Rogatis. The remaining numbers were a 'Danza d'Amore" by Enrique Soro, a three-movement suite by A. Miramontes, "El Condor Pasa" by D. A. Robles, and the "Malaguena" by Ernesto Lecuona which so many pianists play these days.

Taxes to Take 'Bookie' Levies' Place, Nice Says

Md. Governor Seeks New Revenue; Plans 'Pocket Veto' for Relief Bill.

Annapolis, Md., April 14 (AP).—With leaders pledged to consider nothing except relief and relief taxes at the forthcoming special session of the Legislature, interest centered today around Gov. Harry W. Nice's draft of a tax system to raise the money needed.

The Governor said he intends to find taxes as substitutes for the levies he viewed as objectionable in the relief bill, those hinging on legalization of race bookmaking.

He also set out to outline what he considers a schedule that will provide adequate revenue to meet the estimates of the State board of aid and charities—which has held a $6,400,000 total is needed.

House Speaker Emanuel Gorfine and Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Senate, said they consider the outlook dark for an improved relief program at the special session.

Gov. Nice said he will apply a "pocket veto" to the relief bill. Instead of a formal disapproval, it will be set aside and allowed to die for lack of action.

Indications were that the Governor would select either Monday, April 26, or Tuesday, April 27, to begin the extra session which will be limited to 30 days.

Millions say: BREYERS HAVE THE "KNACK"...

Eat Breyers all-ways ICE CREAM

If you were to use the same fine ingredients—and blended them the best you knew how—you still wouldn't get an ice cream like Breyers . . . Why? Because Breyers have the "knack" of making ice cream that tastes better. It must be so—for more people buy Breyers than any other ice cream in America . . . Words simply can't describe this better taste—but one spoonful of Breyers will show you why millions of men, women and children every day pass other ice cream stores to get it.

Britain to Stay Off Gold Basis, Expert States

Sir Charles Webb Credits Trade Gains to Paper Currency Use.

Sir Charles Morgan Webb, eminent British economist, last night told the Academy of World Economics that Great Britain has no more intention of returning to the gold standard now than she had five years ago.

The increase in the British exchange equalization fund, which he said was in reality a "world price-raising fund," was responsible, Sir Charles declared, for the return to prosperity of the 21 nations who financed their commerce on the international paper currency rather than upon gold.

He also warned that inflation must be prevented by international cooperation between the United States, Great Britain, France, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland—the nations which took part in the six-power monetary agreement in 1936.

Inflation Views Differ.

He pointed out, however, that British and American conceptions of inflation don't coincide. Great Britain, he said, believes that world prices have not yet reached the equilibrium level; the United States believes that prices should go no higher.

Sir Charles declared that the present British monetary policy was trying to achieve the same end sought by President Roosevelt in 1933, when he told the London Economic Conference that the United States wanted "the kind of dollar which a generation hence will have the same purchasing and debt-paying power as the dollar value we hope to attain in the near future."

The British economist said that this was a definition of a commodity dollar.

As to the gold standard, Sir Charles cited, besides success of paper currency, the prescription of the Ottawa Monetary Report that interest rates be kept as low as possible.

"Muddling Through."

Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, statistical and research expert for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, declared that the British policy seemed to him to be an instance of "muddling through."

Prof. Josef Salterer, of Georgetown University, and Dr. Charles O. Hardy, of the Brookings Institutions, also took part in the discussion.

Shanghai Textile Treaty Proposed

By the Associated Press.

Corneille Mertens, Belgian workers' delegate to the world textile conference, proposed yesterday that foreign-owned mills in the Shanghai settlements and concessions of China observe any international agreements adopted for the textile industry.

He offered a resolution to bind these mills to such agreements.

"The political aspects of extra-territoriality are beyond the province of this conference," he said, "but we have a right to consider the social aspects."

Mertens referred to the heated contention of Chinese delegates that native mills could not subscribe to further improvement of labor standards unless some way were found to make them applicable to their competitiors, principally British, Japanese and French mills, which operate under separate jurisdiction.

Kan-yo Nieh, China's employer-delegate, charged textile competition backed up by "foreign armed forces" was closing China's trade doors "not only to the rest of the world but to China herself."

Marry or Lose Jobs, Nazi Aides Ordered

Stettin, Germany, April 13 (AP).—Government employes in Pomerania were ordered yesterday to wed by November 1 or lose their jobs. The order handed down by District Leader Franz Schwedecoburg, said:

"Among officialdom there must be the same eagerness to found families as among laborers."

40 Per Cent Gain For Private Jobs Indicated in D. C.

A 40 per cent job placement increase in private industry in the first three months of this year over a corresponding period in 1936, was indicated in a report compiled by the District Public Employment Center for Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

During March of this year the center found jobs outside the Government for 2,250 men and women, the second highest total for any one month since the reorganization of the service in 1933. That represented a gain of 495 over job placements in March, 1936, it was stressed.

The center reported a sharp falling off of WPA jobs, pointing out that its placements in Government public works decreased 64 per cent during the first three months of this year. Figures showed only 886 Government jobs were filled by the service, as compared with 2,480 in the first quarter of 1936.

The report said that this steady increase can be attributed to "the rise in business activity, which is creating work opportunities, and the increasing number of employes who are obtaining all thei remployes through this office because of efficient selection and referral of applications qualified to fill job orders."

Apparently simple, the entire procedure requires several trained experts.

Letter Pinned To Baby Gives Pension to Man

A time-yellowed lace baby's cap brought old-age security to its 71-year-old owner yesterday.

Nearly a year ago, William Miles, of 732 Fifth street northeast, applied to the Board of Public Welfare for old-age assistance under terms of the social security act. But to obtain a pension, it was necessary for him to produce proof of his age.

The law required he be at least 65. Miles was certain he was almost 70, but could offer no evidence. He had no birth certificate, no marriage certificate nor other documents of proof.

His application was referred to Miss Edna Kury, a case worker. She accompanied Miles to his home and the pair rummaged through an old trunk of mementos collected during the years.

And among numerous keepsakes, Miles found a tiny, pink baby's cap, now discolored with age. On a frayed slip of paper pinned in the cap was written Miles' name and birth date, March 5, 1866.

The old man then recalled that the little lace cap was made by his grandmother and presented to his mother when he was born. Both his mother and grandmother died a short time later. The slip of paper was pinned into the cap by Miles' stepmother—his mother's sister.

The old trunk also yielded a lapsed insurance policy which gave additional proof of Miles' birth date. This evidence was accepted by Elwood Street, director of public welfare, as the basis of granting Miles an old-age pension of $32 a month.

Miles was born in Poolesville, Md., and has lived in Washington since he was 19. He has worked with various concerns as a carpenter and foreman, but for nearly five years has been unemployed.

Fat Girls Get The Go-By—Slim Girls Win Men

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers". If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

'White Feather' Bill Defeated By Commons

House Backs Spain Policy After Eden's Denial of Cowardice Charge.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 14 (AP).—The House of Commons tonight smothered a censure motion on the Spanish policy of the cabinet, which was condemned in a seven-hour debate for "running up the white flag."

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, winding up the debate on the government's decision to withhold protection from British merchantmen entering the Spanish Basque port of Bilbao, answered fiery opposition attacks:

"I am not greatly moved by charges of cowardice and white feather which have been made upon this government.

"The foreign secretary of this country is responsible not for his life but for the lives of millions of people.

"In my view, an act of cowardice would be if, in order to score some cheap success, he was to run risks of damaging peace which were not justified by the situation."

Defeated 345 to 130.

The censure motion, presented by Clement R. Attlee, Laborite and leader of the opposition, called upon the house to deplore "the failure of His Majesty's government to give protection to merchant ships on their lawful occasions."

It was defeated, 345 to 130.

Eden declared the entire debate was founded upon misapprehension—that Britain could not grant belligerent rights to one side without according them to both.

Early in the Spanish conflict, he pointed out, the Government side declared the insurgent-held ports in Spanish Morocco, the Balearic Island and the Canary Islands to be a war zone—which was accepted by Britain.

Eden asserted this was an exact parallel with the situation at Bilbao.

Starvation Hinted.

Spokesmen accused the government, in effect, of a partisan British blockade of government Spain by not resisting the insurgents in the Bay of Biscay. They condemned the cabinet for "running up the white flag" to help Spanish insurgents "starve out women and children."

Maj. Attlee made the issue squarely a question of whether Great Britain, with the guns of its fleet, should or should not defy an insurgent blockade off Bilbao, Spain, besieged capital of the Basque autonomous province.

British food ships have been turned back by insurgent warships. The City's population, swelled to hundreds of thousands by refugees, is said to be on reduced rations.

Wife, 2 Children Get Jorss Estate

Amandus F. Jorss, principal owner of the A. F. Jorss Ironworks, named his wife and his two children as the principal beneficiaries of his $291,007 estate, it was shown in District Court yesterday when his will was filed for probate.

Mrs. Katie Jorss, the widow, of 4524 Seventeenth street northwest; the son, Karl Jorss, of 2626 Thirty-first street northwest, and the daughter, Mrs. Elsie Jorss Reilley, also of the Seventeenth street address, were those named to share in the estate.

The German Orphan Asylum and the Ruppert Home were given $1,000 each. The rest of the estate is to be held in trust, with Mrs. Jorss receiving the largest portion and her daughter receiving the income from $30,000 of the fund. After Mrs. Jorss' death, the trust is to be held so that Mrs. Reilley and her brother are to have the income from one-half each for life. Mrs. Reilley's share of the estate is to be divided between her children upon her death. Attorney A. L. Barker represented the estate.

Japanese Take Cameras After Ship Is Snapped

Yokohama, Japan, April 14 (AP).—Police collected all cameras aboard the German liner Jotsdam and questioned 135 passengers for two hours tonight in an effort to find a film supposedly taken of a Japanese destroyer.

The pilot of a naval plane informed authorities he had seen a passenger on the ship photographing a destroyer while passing the Yokohoma naval station. Many Americans were among the group questioned carefully before they were allowed to land here.

U. S. Officials Disagree Over Housing Plans

By the Associated Press.

The Government's highest housing officials differed yesterday over the administration of a proposed billion-dollar Federal housing program.

Interior Secretary Ickes, who has directed the PWA housing activities, said in a message to the Senate Labor Committee that it would be best to entrust the new program to the Interior Department.

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, urged creation of an independent agency, as stipulated in the Wagner housing bill which the committee is studying.

McDonald contended that in the interests of "co-ordination" the proposed three-man administrative unit should consist of the FHA administrator, the chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation Board, and a Presidential appointee. He said there was "bound to be a certain overlapping" of functions of existing agencies with the proposed program.

Ickes contended administration by an independent board would lead "almost inevitably to divided responsibility, delays, disputes and inefficiencies."

Both officials strongly urged the general form of the Wagner legislation be adopted, however.

The bill calls for insurance of a billion dollars of Government bonds in the next four years. The money would be lent to State and local housing authorities, who would build and manage low-cost housing units.

Congress would appropriate an additional $50,000,000 for subsidies to reduce rents.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the committee the measure would increase employment and assist low-income groups to better living conditions.

Demonstrators Jailed.

Patna, India, April 14 (AP).—Jayaprakash Narain, secretary of the All-India Congress party, was sentenced with several other persons today to three months imprisonment for organizing demonstrations against the inauguration of the autonomous constitution for British India April 1.

Good Neighbor Duties Stressed To Rotarians by Culbertson

Former Ambassador to Chile Addresses Pan-American Day Dinner of Club; Three Members From Orient Introduced.

"Neighbors" of North and South America must recognize not only certain rights, but duties as well, William S. Culbertson, former ambassador to Chile, told Washington Rotarians at a Pan-American day luncheon yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

Observance of these duties and rights by all the nations concerned spells success or failure for the good neighbor policy, the former diplomat said.

United States citizens, he pointed out, may well expect protection to their person and property when they go abroad. In return, they have the responsibility of defending the same rights for Latin and South Americans who come to our land.

"The good-neighbor policy," Culbertson said, "is now generally associated with the present National Administration. Actually it has been the basis of understanding among the American nations through the entire course of Pan-American history."

A part of the reality of the Pan-American movement, according to the speaker, has been the participation of the United States in bringing about peace within the Americas.

As a feature of their special program, the Rotarians heard a group of vocal selections by Miss Rosalmire Colomo. She sang Latin-American songs.

Dr. Silvia Da Silva, foreign trade adviser of the Pan-American Union, was introduced as a special guest.

While paying special honor to visitors representing nations of the American continents, the club entertained and introduced three guests from the Orient. Kokicki Uyeda, of the Tokyo Rotary Club, and Muschika Uyeda, also of Tokyo, were present for the luncheon. Introduced also was Richard Sidney, secretary of the Singapore Rotary Club.

D. C. Naval Aide And Brother Hurt In Ohio Air Crash

Henry B. George of 5016 Illinois avenue northwest, was injured seriously in a plane crash last night at Wooster, Ohio, according to the Associated Press. He and his brother, Thomas C., of Philadelphia, crashed at the Wooster airport in a privately owned Taylor Cub plane.

Both appeared seriously hurt, although details were not available. George, an assistant areonautical engineer at the navy yard here, was on a week's vacation and en route to Chicago.

Airport attendants said the plane had stopped for refueling. After taking off, it apparently lacked sufficient power to permit control, and crashed a mile from the landing field. A rainstorm had just ended and wind currents were strong.

George is married and has lived in Washington since 1929, when he was graduated from Purdue University. He has worked in the Bureau of Construction and Repair at the navy yard for eight years, doing designing and experimental work at the wind tunnel there.

Fascists and Jews Clash in London; Many Are Injured

London, April 14 (U.P.).—Many persons were badly injured and six others were arrested late today when 100 British Fascists marched with torchlights into the East End Jewish district of Aldgate.

Flaming torches were flung at shops in and about Whitechapel, where Jewish residents barred their doors and tossed buckets of water from upper windows to extinguish the flames.

From Whitechapel the blackshirts marched into Aldgate, where they were met by a crowd of residents and street fighting broke out. Riot squads of foot police broke up the melee with the aid of mounted officers.

Manslaughter Charge Placed Upon Nobleman

Adele, Ga., April 14 (U.P.).—Involuntary manslaughter charges were substituted for a murder complaint against the Viscount Tarbat of Castle Leod, Scotland, here late today.

The British nobleman was named in a murder warrant, sworn out after James Lupo, of Lenox, Ga., had died of injuries sustained in an accident in which Tarbat figured.

2 Ontario Ministers Quit, Assail Hepburn Stand Against G. M. Union.

never considered it my duty as minister of public welfare to refuse relief to strikers and so have my department become the greatest strike-breaker of all."

Both Croll and Roebuck are considered extreme liberals and both have been labor lawyers. Hepburn is a farmer.

Mayor Hall wired his ultimatum to Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., and followed with a letter. He argued Canadian workmen were losing by the strike while United States workers profited.

"Such conduct negatives the strength of any international union," he said.

His wire:

"The Oshawa strike is going into its second week. Negotiations deadlocked on international union issue. Oshawa workmen lost time during January in the United States through lack of parts. Now losing full time. Men striking for recognition of international union. Imperative international union recognize men.

"Unless agreement signed by end of week, United States members of union must strike. Failing this, I am advising all Canadian workmen Monday night to abandon recognition of union idea."

"My duty as a Canadian citizen and head of Oshawa dictates this action. Consider this an ultimatum. Letter following."

The mayor has indicated his sympathy with the strikers and observed today he was endeavoring to be impartial and "look after the welfare of Canadian citizens and Oshawa."

If the United States workers refuse to lend support by sympathy strikes, Hall said he would tell the Oshawa union workers "they are being fooled and hoodwinked and that the international union is not playing the game with them."

C. I. O. Organizer Hugh Thompson earlier had given an indication that United States union workers wold order a new sit-down strike in Detroit if efforts were made to divert Oshwa orders for cars to other plants.

Course Undecided.

Detroit officials of the U. A. W. A. did not at once announce a course. Vice President Edward C. Hall of the union said "Mayor Hall apparently has some authority and recognition. His demand should be taken up also with General Motors."

Roosevelt Prevents Strike.

San Francisco, April 14 (AP).—A strike ultimatum by representatives of 8,500 Southern Pacific employes brought quick action today from President Roosevelt, who appointed an emergency mediation board and thus staved off a walk-out for at least 60 days.

Anti-Strike League Formed.

Kent, Wash., April 14 (AP).—Business men and growers solidified a vigilante-style organization today to run sit-down strikers off farms in this rich vegetable producing area, and served notice on agricultural laborers that they wanted no repetition of "California's disastrous experience."

Citizens who chased 10 Filipino sit-down strikers from a farm yesterday announced they had recruited 400 citizens to go into action at the sound of the town fire siren.

California was the scene last year of a costly upheaval among lettuce packers and other produce laborers.

C. I. O. Strike in Montreal.

Montreal, Qebec, April 14 (U.P.).—Employes of 12 dress plants tonight called a strike, to become effective tomorrow, involving 5,000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in the first C. I. O. strike in Montreal.

Textile Union Wins Viscose Pay Increase

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—The Viscose Corporation, largest producer of rayon in America, signed an agreement late today with the Textile Workers Organizing Committee granting a 10 per cent pay increase to the 20,000 employes in the corporation's six plants.

The firm, controlling interest of which is owned by Coultaurd's, Ltd., of London, also recognized the committee, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' C. I. O., as the sole collective bargaining agency for the employes.

The agreement does not provide for a closed shop.

Compromise on Wages.

The pay increase, which will cost an estimated $3,000,000 a year, was a compromise. The union originally demanded a flat 10-cents-an-hour increase. This would have cost the firm about $4,000,000.

The agreement was signed by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the T. W. O. C., and Frank Griffin, of Marcus Hook, Pa., vice president of the corporation.

The agreement was the first one signed with a major textile company since the C. I. O. started its recent drive to unionize the industry.

40-Hour Work.

In addition to the pay increase and union recognition, its provides for a 40-hour work, minuimum wages of $15 instead of $13, abolition for the third shift except in cases where continuous process is necessary, and a one week's vacation with pay after one year's service.

The Viscose Corporation manufactures 100,000,000 pounds of rayon a year, about 50 per cent of the world production. It operates plants at Roanoke, Va.; Marcus Hook, Pa.; Meadville, Pa.; Lewistown, Pa., and Parkersburg, W. Va., an additional plant, which is covered in the negotiations, will be opened shortly at Nitro, W. Va.

'Textile NRA' Bill Is Revived By House Body

trial Organization, disclosed yesterday his group will consider the Ellenbogen bill at its next meeting. He declared doubts as to constitutionality had been removed by the Supreme Court's Monday decisions. The C. I. O. has been driving for organization of the textile industry. Lewis said yesterday agreements have been negotiated with "a number" of textile manufacturers, particularly in the North, and negotiations are in progress with the Viscose Co., employing 20,000.

Slow on Labor Bills.

Capitol laborites indicated that while wage and hour legislation may be pressed, they would proceed slowly on further labor relations measures. They fear an effort, already gaining wide support, to impose restrictions on labor in the exercise of its collective bargaining privileges.

The President remained silent yesterday on his labor program, but one report said he might use his budget-relief message to Congress next week as a vehicle for some expression on wages and hours.

A short work-week measure long has been in the background of the Administration's legislative schedule. Some observers suggested Mr. Roosevelt's revised budget measure, in urging need of retrenchment, might stress the work spread possibilities in shorter hours as a leavening influence on the heavy relief burden.

Relief Slash Sought.

Curtailment of new relief appropriations, to provide funds for pending housing, education and farm tenancy measures, and even some increase in CCC quotas, is being agitated at the Capitol. A new attempt to clip the relief load is generally predicted.

Fall of revenues for the present fiscal year below estimates by about $500,000,000 was believed largely responsible for the President's order for new departmental savings, and further reverberations are expected in the relief message. Speaker Bankhead said yesterday he hoped the departmental order "will have some salubrious effect on our expenditures."

A group of new legislative proposals encouraged by the Supreme Court's Monday commerce clause interpretation, were simmering at the Capitol yesterday.

"Piecemeal" Warning.

Commenting that the court's decision "affords the opportunity for new and broad legislation under the commerce clause, not only as to wages and hours, but also as to monopolistic and unfair trade practice," Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, wrote a letter to the President yesterday warning against "piecemeal" legislation.

Celler particularly urged that action on the Tydings-Miller resale price bill be "held in abeyance until Administration policies of a broader nature can be worked out."

"This bill," Celler wrote the President, "which would not only permit manufacturers in interstate commerce to fix without let or hindrance the prices which consumers must pay for their goods, but also permits the fixing of wholesalers' and retailers' margins, would cut directly across the field of trade practice regulation which the Administration may want to occupy. Of even greater importance is the boost it will give to prices already unduly rising, without concomitant increases in wages."

Significant Measure.

Celler suggested the Administration may have "a more adequate approach to this whole subject."

Also seen as significant was joint introduction in House and Senate of a bill "to reinforce and clarify" labor principles embodied in the Walsh-Healey public contracts act of 1936.

Sponsored jointly by Senator Walsh and Representative Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts, the new bill extends the scope of the Walsh-Healey act to all contracts with the Government in excess of $2,500 (present limit is $10,000), and to contracts for services as well as supplies.

To Preserve 40-Hour Week.

Under its terms, bidders violating the national labor relations act would be placed on the ineligible list. Dealers bidding for Government business would be required to certify that goods were manufactured in compliance with labor conditions of the Walsh-Healey act.

Wage, hour, child labor and convict labor conditions of the bill would remain substantially the same. Provision would be made for preserving the basic 40-hour week requirements, but permitting contractors to allow for compensatory time off within a week for days in which their operations lasted for more than 8 hours without payment of additional overtime.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills. Used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous impurities from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Cherry Trees All Are Doomed By Memorial

chase of 1,500 baby trees, 600 of which were to be planted around the Tidal Basin as replacements and to fill in the empty spaces which now exist.

Pending action by the memorial commission on the landscaping recommendations it received this week from the Fine Arts and Park and Planning Commissions, parks officials are undecided as to the disposition of the 600 trees originally ticketed for the Tidal Basin area.

The other 900 are expected to be distributed throughout the park system.

Campaign Minimized.

In this connection, one Government official who is involved in the tangled controversy minimized the campaign, widening daily, to save Washington's famous cherry blossom festival.

"Plans are being made," he said, "to develop Japanese cherry groves in other parts of the city which will be far more handsome than the one at the Tidal Basin."

He requested that his name not be mentioned, as have all other officials who have volunteered information on the subject.

On June 15, 1936, less than two weeks after Congress authorized the Commission to erect a memorial of a design and on a site of its own choosing, Representative Wearin introduced a joint resolution directing that it be "constructed in accordance with the design selected from an architectural competition held in accordance with provisions of the American Institute of Architects and the Fine Arts Commission."

Measures Similar.

The measure died in committee. The resolution he introduced yesterday likewise makes the A. I. A. supervisor of the competition, but does not mention the Fine Arts Commission.

Under Wearin's plan the design selected by competition would be reported to both houses of Congress for final acceptance. His proposal does not go into the matter of location, the youthful Iowan being interested primarily in giving young architects a chance at the rich commission.

Wearin criticized payment of a 6 per cent fee to Pope.

"The present situation," he declared, "is a result of the delegation of too much authority to Congressional commissions without any supervision whatsoever upon the final action of the body on the part of Congress, which should always be the case.

"For that reason it is important that even after the selection of the design through a proper democratic and Jeffersonian method, the results thereof should again be checked over by the legislative body and voted upon."

have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the situatoin today as compared with 1933.

"At that time," he said, "we were in the throes of a devastating depression. In our international relations we were confronted with the unfortunate spectacle of two of our sister nations engaged in bitter warfare, and two other states on the verge of war

"The war which was raging has happily been terminated," the President continued, and "the controversy which almost led to war has almost been solved. The nations of America mutually recognize their interdependence. They know today the welfare and prosperity of each is largely dependent upon the welfare and prosperity of all."

Lauds Unity of Nations.

Commenting on the conference at Buenos Aires which he attended, the President said: "The deepest impression which I carried away was the potency of the unity of the Americas in developing democratic institutions in the New World and by example in helping the cause of world peace."

Native songs of the Latin American countries were sung and played by Washington school children during an enjoyable matinee observance which included South American dances in costume, speeches in Spanish by local school children, and ended with the playing of numerous anthems by the Interhigh School Orchestra.

First suggested on April 14, 1890, by the founding of the Commercial Bureau of the American Republics, forerunner of the Pan American Union, April 14 has been growing in importance yearly and yesterday was observed by some 5,000 schools, clubs and social organizations throughout the United States and as many more in Latin-speaking America.

Emphasis on fostering of the interest of children in Pan Americanism has been noticeable with the passing of the year, and yesterday's party at the Pan American Union marked a new step in the progress of this idea. Diplomats, who heretofore had addressed Washington youngsters formally, were noticeably absent yesterday. It was a children's party from first to last, with speeches and entertainment all provided by schoolboys and schoolgirls.

Children Correspond.

Arthur Hagesteary, of Roosevelt High School, told in Spanish of a correspondence he was carrying on in Spanish with a South American youth who was writing him in English. Such correspondence has been encouraged by the Pan American Union. The boy's speech "Por que soy Panamericanista" (Why I am a Pan American) followed a welcome by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union.

"La Paloma" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," typical Cuban and American songs, were sung by a mixed chorus of the Browne Junior High School. Rumbas and a song "Andalucia," were played by the Interhigh School Orchestra, followed by a playlet presented by students of the Woodrow Wilson High School, with the co-operation of students from Central, Roosevelt and Paul Junior High Schools.

Hull Voices Sentiments.

Secretary of State Hull voiced the strong sentiments of the President when he spoke last night over a national hookup to guests at a social observance of Pan-American Day. Said he:

"Whether we like it or not we live in a world of political and social turmoil. Ominous storm clouds overhang many parts of the world today. We must continuously and unremittingly use the full strength of our continental solidarity to advance the cause of peace."

Continuing, he said, "Armed forces can be no permanent substitute for the security that rests upon trust and observance of international rules of peace and good order. The resort to ever-increasing armaments cannot bring ultimate security."

Hull concluded by stating he thought the Americas could exert a powerful influence on world affairs by acting in co-operation. "Our countries can properly exert an urgently needed stabilizing influence in a world which is woefully in need of sanity and balance," he said.

receive police attention. A motorcycle officer arrests a speeder, hales him into court and obtains a conviction and fine.

"But in most places, if that same speeder had an accident, he would not be arrested unless the officer happened to witness both violation and crash—a rare circumstance. In many cases, those violations which proved actually hazardous and resulted in injury or death are not punished and the police spend their time arresting and convicting drivers who break the law but whose action resulted in no immediate harm."

Modern methods of accident investigation, it was stated, have gone far to reduce the number of hit-and-run crashes. Under the system outlined to local officials yesterday, policemen are trained to detect the slightest fragment of evidence which may lead to the driver who strikes and runs.

And striking particularly at "ticket fixing," the pamphlet said:

"Ticket fixing is an inexcusable evil which discourages the individual police officer, disrupts and disheartens the whole department and, in the long run, brings well-justified public rebuke—rebuke from the same people whom the fixing was supposed to please."

Systematic accident investigation ultimately leads to accident prevention, the pamphlet points out. Accidents become fewer as public respect for enforcement increases. If a law-breaking motorist realizes he has little chance of escaping punishment, he will eventually improve his highway habits, it has been found.

An improved system of accident reporting and recording is also included in the booklet. Complete and accurate reports of accidents permit officials to analyze causes and apply remedial measures, local traffic authorities were told in the pamphlet.

And at the same time yesterday, Inspector William E. Holmes, recently appointed police traffic supervisor, "cracked down" on members of his command, insisting on adequate charges in all cases of traffic violations.

"When evidence points to a driving-while-drunk case," said Inspector Holmes, "I want the driver charged with that offense and not, for instance, reckless driving, a less serious charge. If a man passes a red light and strikes another car, I want him charged with reckless driving and not merely passing a signal."

It also was announced yesterday that a traffic safety school will be inaugurated during summer sessions at the University of Maryland. Its functions will be similar to recent courses conducted at George Washington University.

And in line with this, residents of Montgomery County, Md., are planning a citizens committee on traffic safety. They will form a group to work with District officials toward highway safety promotion throughout the county.

Maryland drivers who work in Washington will be furnished with copies of local regulations and warned to exercise caution while using District highways.

300 Millions Seen As U. S. Loan Limit

President Roosevelt's orders for curtailed spending gave rise to predictions by fiscal authorities yesterday that new Treasury borrowing this fiscal year may be held to about $300,000,000.

Officials reported that heads of Government agencies already have started surveys in response to the President's instructions to act "with a view to a substantial saving."

Text of Roosevelt Address

Text of President Roosevelt's address to the governing board of the Pan-American Union:

We of the Americas have cause for rejoicing today. We meet to celebrate Pan-American Day under the happiest of auspices. All of the nations of the Western Hemisphere are enjoying the boon of peace, and with it the orderly pursuit of the arts and sciences upon which the happiness and security of nations, no less than of individuals, depend. Four years ago it was my privilege to meet with you in the celebration of Pan-American Day and now, as then, I bring to you and through you to the governments and peoples of your respective countries the cordial and fraternal greetings of the people of the United States.

We have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the situation today as compared with that of 1933. At that time we were in the throes of a devastating economic depression. In our international relations we were confronted by the unfortunate spectacle of two of our sister nations engaged in bitter warfare; and two other states on the verge of war. We were living in a period dominated by the destructive forces of suspicion and fear.

Gains Are Great.

It is, therefore, with a feeling of profound satisfaction that we may today contemplate the great gains in our national economics, as well as in the international relations between the nations of the American Continents during this four-year period.

The war which was raging has happily been terminated; the controversy which almost led to war has also fortunately been solved. The nations of America mutually recognize their interdependence. They know today that the welfare and prosperity of each is largely dependent upon the welfare and prosperity of all. By pursuing a policy of reciprocal concessions, in which the Government of the United States is happy to have had a part, the nations of America have made important contributions to the healthy flow of trade and improved economic conditions.

The progress of the last four years culminated in the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace at Buenos Aires, at which significant and far-reaching conclusions were reached. As you are aware, it was my personal privilege to attend the opening session and to meet many of the leaders of American thought and action. The deepest impression which I carried away was the potency of the unity of the Americas in developing democratic institutions in the New World and by example in helping the cause of world peace.

An Outstanding Lesson.

One of the outstanding lessons of the conference was the clear perception on the part of the delegates of the close relation existing between international security and the normal development of democratic institutions. Democracy cannot thrive in an atmosphere of international insecurity. Such insecurity breeds militarism, regimentation and the denial of freedom of speech, of peaceful assemblage and of religion. Such insecurity challenges the ideals of democracy based on the free choice of government by the people themselves. And as a logical development we of the Americas believe that the continued maintenance and improvement of democracy constitute the most important guarantee of international peace.

Moreover the delegates to the Buenos Aires conference well understood that peace is something more significant than the mere absence of conflict. A durable peace, one that will resist the onslaught of untoward or temporary circumstances, is something far more positive and constructive. It demands a policy based on positive international co-operation, on mutual confidence and on united effort in the solution of problems of common concern. In the conventions and resolutions promoting intellectual co-operation and advancing mutual comprehension the conference gave to the world an example which is destined to have far-reaching influence.

Board Is Addressed.

Gentlemen of the Governing Board:

During the past four years we have traveled far, farther, I believe than many of us four years ago thought possible. I am certain I interpret correctly your sentiments and those of your governments and your peoples when I say that we are determined to move forward toward the goal already in sight. On this day, dedicated to the 21 republics constituting the Pan-American Union, let us pledge ourselves to giving practical effect to the conclusions reached at Buenos Aires, and let us dedicate ourselves anew to the strengthening of the bonds that unite us in the great American family of nations.

I express to you, on behalf of the government and people of the United States, a deep sense of obligation and gratitude for the unswerving devotion which your respective governments and peoples have given to the cause which we all have so much at heart—the maintenance of peace on our continent. In this beautiful building, dedicated to the cause of peace, it is most fitting that we assemble today to reaffirm our faith in the high destiny of the Americas.

STOP!
THE BICARBONATE OF SODA HABIT
If You Have Stomach Trouble Due to Excess Acid Soda May Make It Worse
Bicarbonate of Soda is a wolf in sheep's clothing. You think it's helping you—and it does for the moment. But all the while it is making matters worse.
Bicarbonate neutralizes the excess acid that causes heartburn, sour stomach, belching, sourness, bloating, acid indigestion. THEN it starts neutralizing the NORMAL acid content of the stomach. This normal acid content is essential for good digestion. If it's knocked out of balance—made alkaline—your stomach is knocked out, too.
So lay off Bicarbonate. There's a better, safer way to stomach relief—Cal-Trate Tablets. They neutralize ONLY the EXCESS acid that causes the trouble. Then they harmlessly pass out of the system. Be sure you ask for and get Cal-Trate Tablets—they contain no Bicarbonate of Soda and are not a laxative. Sold and recommended by Peoples, and all good druggists. (Adv.)

The Duck Hill Lynchings.

The latest lynchings in Mississippi are an effective stimulus to the demand for enactment of the Gavagan bill, now under debate in the House. This proposed anti-lynching law would allow the Federal Government to take over the case if, after 30 days, the State has not indicted and prosecuted the lynchers. Because of the extraordinary hideousness of the Duck Hill crime, even residents of that community might be expected to approve such intervention.

But sober analysis of the Gavagan measure as it would apply to lynchings generally raises doubt that it would accomplish its purpose. For, in addition to authorizing the Federal Government to proceed against lynchers and the officers who fail to restrain them, the bill would make any county in which a lynching occurs liable to suit for damages. In spite of its laudable purpose, this coercion of local government by Federal action tends to make the proposal distasteful.

The reasoning advanced by Mr. Gavagan and his supporters is that the history of lynching shows local authorities generally unwilling to move against mob murderers, though every State has a law requiring their punishment. Under these circumstances, it is argued, it becomes necessary for the Federal Government to step in and insure the protection of citizens' lives. The implicit presumption, however, that jurymen in, say, the Duck Hill region will not indict when serving on a State panel but would when sitting in a Federal court seems open to considerable question.

Nor do all States with high Negro populations where lynchings predominate deserve the charge of inaction against the crime. Virginia is one notable exception; there has not been a lynching in Virginia for 10 years. This is clearly the result of the fact that public opinion in Virginia has come to demand an end to lynching. And, to an appreciable extent, this same enlightenment is spreading through the South. At least, fewer than 10 lynchings were recorded throughout the country last year, as against 30 in 1935.

The solution of the lynching problem seems to lie in this direction rather than in that proposed by the Gavagan bill which might result in reviving the bitter emotions of Reconstruction days. By a bitter irony, too, it is crimes of such extreme bestiality as that reported from Duck Hill which will hasten the reform in public opinion necessary to end them forever.

Justice For The Poor.

Some members of the local bar are continuing their fight against the plan to establish a branch of the District Municipal Court for small claims and conciliation cases. Appearing before the Senate District Committee in opposition to the King bill they maintained that such legislation is unnecessary because the local Bar Association has appointed a committee of volunteer lawyers to serve poor ligitants without charge.

Judge Cayton, who led the campaign for the small claims court, points out, however, that this plan is not even an approach to the real problems which the bill before the District Committee undertakes to solve. The mere furnishing of free legal advice is not an adequate substitute for the systematic and continuous aid that would be afforded by judges and clerks paid to render service at all times.

The advantages of the small claims court have been demonstrated in numerous cities in which such courts have been functioning, in some cases for many years. In testifying before the District Committee on behalf of the King bill Judge Cayton emphasized the fact that there is nothing revolutionary about the plan. The bill has been based upon careful study of tried and tested rules and statutes in many jurisdictions, including the 16 States in which small claims courts have been set up under Statewide laws.

As frequently stated in these columns, the bill is merely intended to simplify and expedite the procedure for adjustment of small claims. The chief beneficiaries of the proposed legislation would be wage earners, and other persons of limited means who for various reasons are unable or unwilling to contest unjust demands or prosecute just claims.

In communities where such courts have become well established, they have provided services appreciated not only by those directly aided but by lawyers as well. There appears to be no valid reason for opposing the projected form which merely seeks to assure justice to the poor man both as plaintiff and defendant. The loss of legal fees due to passage of the bill would probably be negligible while the improvement in morale due to more even-handed administration of justice would yield returns not measurable in monetary terms.

That Growing Deficit.

President Roosevelt's evident concern over the disappointing revenue returns and the unexpectedly large current deficit is revealed in his appeal to departmental heads to eliminate or defer all expenditures not absolutely necessary at this time. This belated effort to curtail outlays toward the close of the fiscal year is not likely to yield substantial economies. Sporadic retrenchment will doubtless result, but there are distinct limits to the amount of cutting and paring that can be done by government departments when most of their current appropriations have been spent.

The importance of the President's message is due chiefly to its possible bearing upon the spending and taxing policies of the Administration during the coming fiscal year. His emphasis upon the need for economy strengthens the hope that the present rather ineffective gesture will be followed by a comprehensive retrenchment program designed to bring the budget speedily into balance.

When the President's revised budget and relief estimates are presented to Congress next week an opportunity will be afforded to outline a plan of this sort. Imposing economies are easily obtained on paper. But to insure actual curtailment in day-to-day spending it is essential to reform the loose and wasteful policies that are so largely responsible for existing difficulties.

Fortunately there appears to be a growing realization among Administration spokesmen that the scale of relief expenditures is excessive. Furthermore opposition is developing to new kinds of legislation calling for fresh drains upon the Treasury. A few days ago, for instance, Senator Robinson issued a guarded warning that if expenditures are not kept under control new taxes will have to be voted. He repeated that warning with more vigor in opposing a bill carrying an appropriation for Federal subsidies for education. Like Senator Borah, he based his objections not on consideration of the bill on its merits, but on the realization that the Federal Government cannot afford to pile up deficits by adding to uncovered expenditures.

The gravity of the situation created by this reckless system of spending is emphasized by the figures made public this week by Representative Snell. He summarizes "President Roosevelt's progress toward a balanced budget" during the past nine months, as compared with the previous year, as follows: "Monthly income up $84,000,000; monthly outgo up $97,000,000: average monthly deficit up $13,000,000."

In face of this showing Senator Robinson's insistence that new expenditures must not be incurred without voting new taxes to meet them is only a most elementary precaution. The country is, as Representative Snell says, following the path that inexorably leads toward a disastrous inflation. Administration efforts to convince the public that the threat of high and rising prices is due to non-monetary, non-budgetary causes should not be suffered in silence.

If the danger were not real, and growing ever more menacing, a party leader like Senator Robinson would not be so emphatic or persistent in his demands for economy. Nor would he urge as the only alternative to retrenchment imposition of new taxes far beyond those which the Administration is willing to contemplate.

Urgent Hospital Needs.

The special appeal for funds being made by the nine local hospitals should meet with the sympahetic response of every Washingtonian. The emergency which these institutions now face is clearly the most critical in their history. They are averaging a shortage of $10,000 a month. Obviously this state of affairs cannot continue without forcing a serious curtailment of the essential services rendered by the hospitals of the District to the needy sick.

For two years the hospitals have struggled under an unusually heavy load with available funds far short of the amounts needed. In the fall of 1935 it was estimated by the Medical Society that at least $350,000 would be needed to carry the nine hospitals through the ensuing year. Actually, because the Community Chest failed to reach its quota, only $276,000 was allotted to those institutions. The last Community Chest drive again fell short of its goal and, in consequence, the hospital budget was again forced below actual needs.

Since the Community Chest drive was designed to preclude any special appeals for funds by its constituent bodies, it is unfortunate that a separate campaign for the hospitals is now needed. The only way such appeals can be prevented, however, is by filling the Chest and making available to the hospitals and the other institutions the funds they must have to carry on. In the present circumstances this special drive is the only means by which a desperate situation confronting the local hospitals can be remedied.

Maryland's Relief Dilemma.

Maryland's relief muddle is a serious reflection upon the leadership of both Gov. Nice and the General Assembly. The Governor is in the awkward position of having decided to veto a revenue bill for relief purposes largely because it contains a tax on bookmaking suggested by himself. The Legislature is being roundly criticized for its attempt to raise money by legalizing gambling and for its failure to provide adequate relief.

In the circumstances there seems to be no reasonable alternative to calling the General Assembly again into session for the enactment of a new relief measure. Gov. Nice has courageously recognized his error in suggesting that bookmakers might properly be licensed to raise money for relief. Apparently the outpouring of public criticism has convinced him that he was wrong. But his failure to provide constructive leadership in the matter while the bill was still under consideration will add to the outlays for relief the cost of an extra session.

The Governor's decision to reconvene the Legislature followed receipt of an opinion from the State's attorney general holding that the executive item veto can be employed only in the case of appropriation bills. More than three-fourths of the States have adopted the item veto as a useful means of eliminating objectionable provisions from sound legislation. It is particularly valuable in the case of appropriation bills, since it permits executives to curb extravagant spending and to frustrate "pork-barrel" raids. The chief weakness of the item veto is that it tends to encourage irresponsibility on the part of the Legislature and gives the executive a club that may be used to keep lawmakers in line with his policies.

Indications are that Gov. Nice would have employed the item veto against the bookmaking tax if he could legally have done so. But that would not have solved the acute relief problem. With the tax on gambling removed, revenue would have fallen far short of minimum requirements. Indeed, the Governor contends with the support of many leading citizens that the present revenue bill is far from being adequate with the gambling tax included.

The entire incident suggests an unwillingness to face up to the problem of raising funds for an adequate relief of hunger and destitution. It was the effort to evade this responsibility which led to the deplorable deviation from what Gov. Nice calls "the fundamental principles and moral standards of our State." Since that course has been emphatically denounced, the Legislature may now be encouraged to grapple more realistically and more courageously with the relief problem.

Bullitt's Billet.

For an American Ambassador life is not all beer and skittles. Sometimes it is wine and victuals.

William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, has been knighted by a famous organization of French Wine Tasters, his accolade administered by a wine press with a clinking glass and no heel-taps. Wearing his best bib and tucker, a red robe with ermine trimmings and a square hat, he was initiated in a wine cellar in the heart of the Burgundy vineyards. The ceremony itself, an Associated Press dispatch informs us, "consists of extensive bibbing," it being understood, one surmises, that the competent bibber never tuckers out.

Our heart goes out in sympathy to the man who with serious work to do must needs take on a host of social duties from which there is no escape; for, oh, how he must hate it all. But, nevertheless, our gallant knight in armor bright goes gayly to the fray and lets no morning afterthoughts in any way dismay.

Happily we have no lack of patriots; and no ambassadorial job ever has to go a-begging. Beyond question there are among us some intrepid souls who could even envy Bullitt his billet.

What sort of entry does the recording angel make to cover this case: A man puts a slug in a pay telephone booth and gets a wrong number.

Where The States Fail.

(From the Baltimore Sun.)

It would be difficult to find a more illuminating example of the contrast frequently shown between administration of justice in Federal courts and the courts of too many States than is now being witnessed in Kansas City. For years there has existed in that city a corrupt political machine. It has repeatedly committed flagrant election frauds. The debauchery of the ballot box has been notorious. Nevertheless the city has proceeded, year after year, to elect to office tools of the machine, and the crimes have been ignored.

Precisely what brought the long arm of the Federal Government into the picture at this time is not clear. True, candidates for Federal office were involved in the election in which the recent frauds were committed, but often in the past fraud equally gross has been practiced in similar circumstances. The point is that Federal prosecutors had no difficulty in collecting the evidence to prove to a jury that there had been no pretense of an honest election and an honest count. The same evidence was available to State authorities, to local courts and all other local law enforcement agencies, but nothing was done about it. It remained for Federal officials to act upon widely known frauds.

It is this refusal of State officials to act in protection of the public when its most sacred privileges are violated that explains, in part, the extent to which the Federal Government is relied upon to intervene in a province that properly belongs to the States.

Absurd Paraphrase.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have paraphrased the Senate resolution on sit-ins and spies, in an attempt to demonstrate its absurdity.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), that it is the sense of the Congress that burglary is illegal and contrary to sound public policy.

That the system of private property protection breeds fear, suspicion and animosity, tends to cause burglary and racketeering and is contrary to sound public policy, and that it is likewise contrary to sound public policy for any property owner not to give to the Community Chest. J. M.

Washington, April 8.

Anti-Lynching Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder how many of the people of the United States realize that Congress is about to enact a so-called anti-lynching bill which will provide, among other things, that if a person is lynched the county or other political subdivision in which the lynching takes place must pay to the next of kin of the accused person the sum of $10,000.

It is quite possible that an accessory before or after the fact in a foul crime would be entitled to $10,000 if he or she happened to be the next of kin to a person lynched, say, for rape. GIBSON.

Washington, April 13.

Move On Proposed Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am always enthusiastic about every improvement for Washington. I am not in favor of making over what is already beautiful; let us make the beauty go farther.

Thomas Jefferson was a mountain-top builder. I am sure he would not wish a memorial to him built low on the water (that would be George Washington's place as his homes were always on river banks). Why cannot the Jefferson Memorial take the form of a singing tower on top of our Mount Hamilton? That would be far more fitting. Washington does not have the attraction of a singing tower. Formerly we heard much about the development of Mount Hamilton into a beauty spot. Let us beautify it now. A singing tower in Washington would be as much appreciated as is the Bok Tower in Florida.

We all associate a library with the name of Jefferson. Various sections of Washington seem to be badly in need of libraries. Why should not a beautiful Jefferson Library be built in some needed section? That would be another choice for a fitting memorial.

We also associate patents with Jefferson. Wouldn't a Patent Museum be a fitting memorial? That would be an attraction different from anything else in the United States and would be one peculiarly suited to the city of Washington. Jefferson was an inventor.

We always think of Jefferson in connection with education. A planetarium is very educational, and Washington does not have one. When people make "the trip of their lives" to see Washington they would enjoy having a planetarium located here.

Washington is almost ruined with too many useless statues. Any future honor paid to anyone should be in the form of something useful. I was so grateful when the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial became an island for nature lovers instead of another building to detract from the beauty of the Lincoln Memorial, which should stand alone in its type.

To me the Japanese cherry trees around the Basin are a memorial to the Tafts and should be left as such. The cherry trees are as intimately connected with Washington as is the Washington Monument, and people all over the United States express the desire to come to Washington to see them. They would just as lief have the Washington Monument torn down and removed as to have the Basin and its cherry trees changed. The Basin should have the cherry trees featured more and more. More cherry trees should be planted there.

Also, it is sometimes forgotten that many people in the United States live all their lives far removed from water beauties. We fail fully to appreciate just what the enjoyment of river parks, large basins, lakes and even fountains mean to people who are hungry for the sight of water. Let the people enjoy every inch of water to the greatest extent possible.

MABLE FERN FALING.

Washington, April 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To anyone not born yesterday it becomes increasingly evident that the whole vast Tidal Basin scheme has been conceived and promoted to provide more profitable contracts for the concrete and cement trusts, with Thomas Jefferson as the present excuse.

It is equally evident that a scheme so gigantic could not have been put over without some influence powerful in the Government.

It is proper to ask then what this hidden influence may be.

For instance, is there some high official interested in the building trades whose private fortune might be increased through large and profitable asphalt, concrete and cement contracts?

GEORGETOWN.

Washington, April 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A foreigner, who had not visited Washington since 1903, said to me while we were battling our way through a maze of heavy traffic: "I am horrified by your modern city. When I was here over 30 years ago, I thought it the most charming city in the world, with its lovely old homes and gardens, well-kept parks, filled with the most beautiful flower beds. What a change! The splendid historic mansions have been supplanted by hideous parking lots, hot-dog stands; flowers have disappeared from the parks and picturesque paths removed and concrete highways substituted!"

No doubt the foreigner in question will have more to say when the concrete mixers start uprooting the Japanese cherry trees and flowering plants to make way for the latest proposed project, in beautiful Potomac Park.

It seems but a question of a few years before the commercially minded convert our squares into parking places, at the rate we are going, and the Ellipse should prove especially suitable for a commercial airport or tourist camp. E. K. G.

Washington, April 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems beyond belief that the American people can permit such a crime to be committed in our midst as the wanton and unnecessary destruction of what is generally admitted to be one of the most beautiful spots in the world, our cherry trees grouped around the Tidal Basin. Then, too, it was the inspired gift of an old, friendly and beauty-loving nation to a young and growing republic.

I have traveled much, but nowhere have I seen such ravishing beauty as we have on our own unappreciated speedway in Washington City—and now this fairy-like vista is slated for destruction by vandals.

Civil Service Retirement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of April 9, on retirement of civil service employes, you wisely stated, in effect, that the first objective should be to promote efficiency in civil service.

Other objectives which deserve consideration are: 1, To make available a career service for unemployed young men and women, at a minimum expense to the Government, by the equitable retirement of men and women whose efficiency has been impaired. This policy is definitely in the public interest. 2, Humane and equitable treatment of employes who have rendered long years of service and are only partially disabled and incompetent.

These objectives could be accomplished, in my understanding, without any additional cost to the Government, if the provisions of the act of July 3, 1926 (Public No. 522, Sixty-ninth Congress), covering involuntary separation from the service (Section 7 of act) were extended to cover voluntary separation. Section 7 provides for an immediate life annuity, at 55 years, after 15 years' service, "having a value equal to the present worth of a deferred annuity, beginning at the age at which employes would otherwise become eligible for superannuation retirement.

The equivalent of an annuity of $1,200 per annum at 68 years is an annuity of $564 per annum at 55 years. In lieu of serving 13 additional years, and receiving $1,200 per annum, the employe could retire at 55 without any additional retirement cost, and the Government would benefit by some portion of the 13 years' salary and be able to provide employment for additional people. The advantage to the Government is obvious.

The small amount of the immediate annuity at 55 years would deter able employes from exercising the prerogative of retirement, but employes might be able to supplement it from their savings and live comfortably, or not being totally and permanently disabled, might augment it by some gainful work.

As a minor executive in the civil service, I am confident that the efficiency of the service and the welfare of the existing personnel could thus be increased without expense to the Government. Without being in the class which you designate as "prematurely senile" many between the ages of 55 and 68 are unable to meet the high standard of efficiency required in civil service. In many instances they have worked overtime year in and year out. Like other tools, their service life is exhausted. In an era in which the morale of high school and college graduates is being destroyed by lack of employment, public interest could well be served by absorbing able unemployed young men and women in the civil service and by retiring those who are "marking time." The Chest And Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Willett, director of the Community Chest, makes a fairly good case for support of the Y. M. C. A. by the Chest, but what can he say for its support of the American Legion and the V. F. W.?

For the past three years I have declined to contribute to the Chest because it was helping to support these veterans' organizations, which were using their own funds for promoting a raid on the Treasury. If any organization of veterans is to be assisted by the Chest, it would seem to me the Disabled Veterans' Association should have first consideration. JOHN C. JACKSON.

Two Flags.

IT was Friday evening, April 14, 1865. The eminent actress, Miss Laura Keene, was appearing in a play called "Our American Cousin," at Ford's Theater in the City of Washington. At long last the War Between the States was over, had been over a week, for on April 9 Gen. Lee had surrendered to General Grant at Appomattox. Abraham Lincoln was President of the United States.

The excitement that had seized Washington and America over the ending of the war had not yet abated. In Ford's Theater that night the audiece rose to render an ovation as the President and Mrs. Lincoln entered, accompanied by their two guests, Miss Clara H. Harris, daughter of United States Senator Ira H. Harris, of New York, and her fiance, Maj. Henry R. Rathbone, U. S. A. The band played "Hail to the Chief," the Presidential party was seated in the state box and the play, interrupted for the entrance of the President and his party, continued.

This was to have been a gala evening. It was known that the President would attend the theater and the Presidential box had been draped with two large American flags made of silk. From the audience and from the stage these flags were plainly visible, and contemporary drawings published everywhere after that night showed them across the face of the President's box. Then again the play was interrupted, this time by the sound of a firing pistol, and the horrified theater rose to see a man leap from the state box to the stage.

The man's spur caught in one of the flags and tore it, with the force of his weight, to shreds. John Wilkes Booth, a member of an acting family, himself an actor of average ability, but whose greater interest lay in Confederate politics and the slavery issue, fell forward on the stage, fracturing his leg. This was his last appearance behind any footlights. Instantly Booth rose, and striding as best he could across the stage, past the stunned performers of "Our American Cousin," passed into the first entrance and escaped from the theater. Two weeks later he was caught. Mr. Lincoln was carried from the theater to a house across the street and there, a few hours later, early in the morning of April 15, 1865, he died.

Upon orders of the Government, Ford's Theater was locked and left intact. One month later, in May, Mr. Ford, accompanied by several actors from his Holiday Street Theater in Baltimore, was permitted to enter his theater in Washington. Among those with Mr. Ford was a man named John A. Ellinger, who later lived in Washington and was employed in the Department of Justice. As Mr. Ford and his party stood in the empty theater that day, talking of the tragedy, Mr. Ellinger asked Mr. Ford for a piece of the flag that had been torn in Booth's leap. The flag was the property of the theater, and with Mr. Ford's consent it was removed from the box and cut up then, and pieces of it were distributed to the actors accompanying him.

Two pieces of this flag are known to be in existence today, 72 years after President Lincoln's death. One is in the Lincoln collection of Mr. Charles G. Gunther, of Chicago, the other—and this is the piece Mr. Ford gave Mr. Ellinger—was purchased more than 25 years ago, on June 9, 1911, by Mr. Anton Heitmuller, of Washington, from Mr. Ellinger himself.

This souvenir measures 6 inches by 15 inches and remains now along with a certificate of its authenticity, signed by John A. Ellinger, and an original program of "Our American Cousin" in the private Lincoln collection of Mr. Heitmuller, who has spent 40 years acquiring these things.

The other flag that draped the President's box on the night of his assassination now hangs inconspicuously in a case on the wall of the north corridor of the Treasury Department Building here in Washington. In February of this year a resolution was submitted in Congress proposing that this flag be preserved and displayed with other Lincoln relics. It is to be hoped that this will be done, and there surely is no better place for it than the Lincoln Museum, opened in 1932 by the Government, in the building that was Ford's Theater.

Today is the anniversary of President Lincoln's death. The War Between the States is over, has been over not a week, but 72 years. The red brick house across the street from Ford's, in which Mr. Lincoln died, still stands. This house was then occupied by one William Petersen, a tailor, who had let out several of his rooms. The one in which the President died was taken by a clerk in the War Department.

The President died at 7:22 a. m. Mrs. Lincoln and their son, Robert, had visited him repeatedly during the night. At a little after 9 o'clock the President's body was wrapped in an American flag and removed to the White House. The funeral was held from the East Room, the procession passing on to the Capitol. The Nation was in grief, for its Emancipation President had passed into eternity.

Libya And Florida.

IN FLORIDA the cable stories from Rome about Mussolini's development of the Libyan Desert and his grandiose plans for the future are too childish for serious consideration. Italy has held Libya for 25 years, and the total achievement in a quarter of a century, including 15 years under the Duce, consists of three hotels, a gambling casino, a palace for Itala Balbo, the Fascist Governor; one asphalt road into the desert and a little 5-mile area of citron and truck farms spread out from the town of Tripoli.

The Italian population, aside from the few exiled optimists who do the farming, consists entirely of garrison and hotel staff, and the majority of natives are scabby with devouring diseases and live like wild dogs in stone igloos in the settlements or in fox holes scooped out of sand hills in the desert.

Mussolini is proud of the hotels, which are maintained at a dead loss by government subsidy, and of his seaplane bases. But the whole development of this important colony of the new Italian empire would be put to shame by a single township almost anywhere along the east coast of Florida, and his seaplane shops and equipment, all conducted by the military establishment, look like the kit of an itinerant umbrella mender when compared with the great Pan-American port and works in Miami.

These dictators talk so big and loud that in time they tend to convince not only themselves but the neighbors. Strangers do not go to Tripoli these days, and the journalists who do make the trip under the fussy auspices of the motherly Signor Alfieri, the Fascist supervisor of the press, cannot be expected to write faithful descriptions of the scene.

Thus the impression is made that Mussolini has achieved miracles of development and colonization, when actually the net result would not warrant a paragraph in the American papers if performed by private enterprise in this country.

• • • •

BACK FROM TRIPOLI the desert stretches into the distance, bleak, morose and arid, and sparsely peopled by primitive brutes whose fiber and veins for hundreds of years have been corrupted by foul disease.

Back from Miami, Palm Beach or any of the bright cities and towns of the Florida pleasure coast lie stretches of pine and palm and fertile muck, lakes full of fish and swamps full of cypress timber. The population is largely of the pioneer type, though they hardly realize that, for this is still a frontier State inside the coastal strips of both sides of the peninsula.

The Seminole Indians, members of a vanishing race, may be roughly compared with the native population of Libya in their resistance to modern ways, but the Seminoles hardly count now, except as side-show attractions.

They just go their way back in the glades, mysterious, sot on their primitive ways, aloof and still resentful in their hearts for outrageous treatment at the hands of the conquerors.

It is hardly necessary to recite again the treasures of climate and soil which lie between the ocean and the gulf in the long peninsula of Florida, for that was done to the limit of human endurance in the days of the mad boom a decade ago and more. Asparagus, beans, tomatoes, celery, strawberries, sugar, fruit, fish, turpentine and lumber appear on the list, and the one great lack is conscience, for the spirit of the State is hard, and avarice excludes all thought of social and civil duty.

• • • •

BUT FLORIDA is still new, and another boom is gathering now, assisted by talk of inflation and the argument that land is the only investment when money goes on the loose. There may be time for education and political reform when the scramble is over.

There are towns thrown together, abandoned and gone to weeds in Florida which would humiliate Mussolini's proud Bontinia, the tailor-made farm village on the reclaimed swamps near Rome, and there are areas of farm land drained of water and producing crops in which Benito's reclamation would hardly make an acre.

Yet this country is constantly hearing, with a distinctly threatening note, of the marvels done by the Duce and, such is the power of reiteration and a pop-eyed theatrical glare, is accepting these claims at face value, though marvels much more amazing lie ready for inspection here at home.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Trout Season.

The trout season opens about this time of year in most States, but this correspondent will not participate. The traffic in those brooks has become too congested. Angling has become too complicated by such problems as whether a north and southbound fisherman has the right of way over an east and westbound fisherman.

• • • •

Those brooks are so crowded on opening day that you are sure to get into a heated argument with dozens of anglers over whether a heavy, slow-going fisherman should move over and allow lighter, fast-going anglers to pass.

• • • •

This department has found the early trout anglers pathetically ignorant on the fine points of trout fishing. Half of them don't know enough to hold out their hands when they are going to make a left turn. Thousands of anglers back up, while playing a fish, without signaling to the fisherman behind them.

• • • •

And the traffic situation at intersecting streams is terrific. When a mob of early spring anglers splashing down one brook runs into an army of anglers splashing down another nothing but chaos can ensue.

• • • •

We were fishing a north and south stream last season on opening day with 5,000 other idiots when we ran smack into a line of 6,000 or 7,000 fishing a cross stream.

• • • •

• • • •

A friend of ours had a head-on collision with a fisherman who turned in swiftly from a cross-stream and was completely telescoped.

• • • •

There isn't any peace and quiet in the trout stream any more. You find hot dog stands, slot machines, barbecues, carrousels, pumping stations, cabanas and dance halls right beside the brooks.

• • • •

The only things missing in those rustic streams are markers reading "Trout Brook No. 1." "You Are Now Passing Pool No. 45. Come Again," and "This Is Blodgett's Brook. Thank You."

• • • •

• • • •

Trout in those brooks? Don't be silly! There isn't room for 'em to swim.

High Heels.

When I was young I walked on stilts,
More fearfully than gayly,
Unlike those blithesome gals unsung

FAD.

You can imagine the nervousness among members of the prison kitchen staff when those New York restaurant racketeers began arriving to serve their terms.

Destination.

The down path makes a lovely slide,
But who wants in the depth to bide?
I would much rather puff and climb
And hope to reach the heights sometime!

Cultural Olympics

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

EARLY THIS MONTH, and without any assistance from the Federal Treasury, the University of Pennsylvania started to search out, in the Philadelphia area, young men and women talented in the arts. The hope was that eventually such geniuses, or near geniuses, as it discovers may be given opportunity for maximum development. Specifically, it began to conduct district eliminations for a "Cultural Olympics," announced last November, upon which work has been in progress ever since.

The total of those between 12 and 25 years of age who are registered for the festivals of music, art, drama, literature and the dance, that are to conclude on May 22, is rapidly approaching 100,000, according to Dr. Frederick G. Gruber, director. Individuals within those ages, and residents of four counties in and around Philadelphia, two in southern New Jersey, and Wilmington, Dela., are being admitted to what is believed to be the first such Olympics that has been held since dramatic and poetic contests were held in ancient Greece in connection with athletic games. Next year the age limits and territory may be extended. Eventually, it is hoped, the event may become national or international.

Only One Similar Innovation Reported.

SO FAR national attention to the Philadelphia idea has resulted in only one new kind of Olympics, Dr. Gruber told your correspondent. This has been announced at Hunter College, N. Y., which institution, it is asserted, shortly will hold a "Pie-Baking Olympics."

The farthest point from which comment has been received has been Palestine. From there someone forwarded, about a month ago, a copy of the Palestine News, which commented favorably on the Pennsylvania Cultural Olympics as the first held in America, or for that matter anywhere, since the days of Grecian glory. And early in March a story showed up in France, indicating that at the University of Montpellier the project of an "Olympic Games of the Mind," enlisting the cultural leaders of all nations, was being seriously considered.

"The idea seems to be sprouting everywhere," Dr. Gruber said.

The Philadelphia plan really originated in 1929, when it was suggested by Samuel S. Fleisher, retired manufacturer, philanthropist and patron of the arts and of artists. In November, with financial assistance from private sources, it was put into effect under the auspices of the university's School of Education. Dr. Gruber, a teacher of English in one of Philadelphia's high schools, who is actively interested in several arts, was given the job of direction, with the guidance of a committee of distinguished educators and art lovers.

Since February 1 he has had to give it his full time; and the cooperation of an increasing number of citizens, as committee heads and as judges, has been enlisted. Art shows, auditions and exhibitions are being held in all districts this month, to be followed by regional eliminations, and then by a final festival on the campus of the university.

Minimum standards of excellence for those permitted to participate in the events have been drawn up by qualified committees, and have been supplied in mimeographed form to all the institutions—chiefly elementary and high schools—that are cooperating in the initial festival. Those who qualify for the series of elimination events will be judged by competent juries, and a series of awards will be made.

Competitive Spirit To Be Soft-Pedaled.

JUST AS the tests of ability and achievement are described as "festivals," and not as competitions, the awards to be given are carefully not being called "prizes," and the element of competitive rivalry is being minimized. For those who place high in the district and regional events certificates of merit will be awarded, and there will be certificates of participation for those who win through to the final tests on the campus on May 20, 21 and 22. Awards of merit will be given in the form of certificates as a result of the finals. The number of these certificates that are to be awarded will be left to the discretion of the judges.

In this way, it is pointed out, the real objectives of the Olympics will be achieved without building up bitterness of spirit, or fertilizing the growth of inferiority complexes. These objectives are the encouragement of the use of leisure time in constructive cultural pursuits, and the discovery of nascent genius.

In the categories of events there is no provision for the development of crooners, or for performers on the mouth organ, accordion, mandolin, or for jazz and hotcha noise in general. "These may have their place," commented the director, who is not averse to a reasonable recognition of modern music, "but we do not feel they have any place in the Olympics."

The classification under which the musical tests are being made, include male, female and mixed choruses, orchestras, small instrumental groups, vocal solos and solos on any of the following instruments: piano, harp, organ, violin, viola, violoncello, bass viol, flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, cornet, trombone, French horn, barytone horn and tuba.

In the plastic and graphic arts, there are being held exhibits in various convenient centers in the seven counties, of oils, water colors, pen and pencil sketches, photography, block printing, applied design, sculpture and modeling.

Under speech and literature there is presentation of one-act plays, reading of lyrical verses, choral speaking, reading of original verse, reading of original prose and extemporaneous public speaking. Comparisons are being made at special auditions.

Preliminary Trials In Dramatics This Month.

SIX DRAMATIC evenings are planned for Philadelphia alone during April, for the purpose of preliminary judging. The Moore Institute and Philadelphia School of Design for Women is sponsoring art exhibits of the work of Olympics participants twice during April. April 29 is chosen for a dance festival at the William Penn High School. April 15 is selected for a music festival in Germantown, and April 27 for another in the building of the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association. Similar arrangements have been made in Bucks, Delaware, and Montgomery Counties in Pennsylvania, in Wilmington and in Camden and Gloucestetr Counties in New Jersey. Judges have been selected by four main committees, in consultation with participating schools, museums, art institutes, settlement houses and social service agencies.

The finish of the Olympics is expected to be quite impressive. It will include, on Thursday night, May 20, the opening of the final festival with a "Hymn to Art," sung by a chorus of at least 1,000, probably on the stage of Convention Hall. Words and music of the hymn are being writtetn especially for the occasion. The final music festival will be held that night. The next day there will be an all-day dance "festival" in an auditorium on the campus; and the following day there will be a carnival of literary readings and dramatic presentations. The final art exhibit will be open all three days in the Young Men's Christian Association building at the university.

Wisconsin 'Wagner' Act Is Signed by La Follette

Madison, Wis., April 14 (AP).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette today signed the Wisconsin labor disputes bill, proposing to do within State boundaries what the national administration undertakes through the Wagner act—set up enforceable procedure for collective bargaining between employers and workers.

The bill, the first of its kind to be adopted by any State, will become law through publication within the next three days. Under the law, a three-man State labor relations board is empowered to make rules and regulations and to conduct hearings and investigations.

Schacht Regards Pacts As Way to Trade Peace

Brussels, Belgium, April 14 (AP).—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economics, concluded economic discussions with Premier Van Zeeland today with the assertion that "lasting improvement in international economic relations is possible only after establishment of political accord, including large and small nations."

Observers attached significance to the German Reichsbank president's statement as possibly meaning Germany does not exclude Soviet Russia from any future European trade pact.

Britain Waits

By Barnet Nover

There's Always Tomorrow.

THE BRITISH position on the Spanish crisis has been, from many points of view, as chock full of contradictions as a plum pudding is of raisins. It must be recognized, however, that the determining line of policy pursued by the Baldwin government has been singularly consistent.

This paradox deserves analysis. Since the beginning of the civil war in the Iberian Peninsula, Great Britain has never concealed the fact that in her opinion all other considerations of policy are secondary to the avoidance at all costs of a general European war. Through thick and thin her aim has been to prevent the Spanish conflagration from spreading. This end, in the eyes of London, has justified all the means.

It is no longer a secret that the real sponsor of the nonintervention plan was not France but Great Britain. The Baldwin regime was fearful that the Blum government's sympathies with the Spanish Popular Front would lead France to support Madrid at a time when Italy and Germany were revealing a determination to support Gen. Franco.

Great Britain, therefore, prevailed upon France to assert its willingness to abstain from doing, what under international law, it had a right to do, provided the Fascist powers, at the same time, gave a pledge to abstain from exercising a right they did not possess.

• • • •

SUCH A PLAN obviously did violence to a well-established principle in international relations. From a pragmatic point of view, however, the British argued that it was entirely justifiable since it tended to avert a general European explosion certain to involve the United Kingdom.

It soon became evident, however, that the nonintervention agreement was being honored only in the breach. Anyone capable of reading the newspapers became aware of the fact last summer that Italy and Germany were sending arms, munitions, airplanes and "volunteers" to the rebels. But the nonintervention committee at London, under pressure from Great Britain, took cognizance of these charges only to deny them even as later, when Russia began to render the loyalists invaluable assistance, the committee also whitewashed Russia.

• • • •

THIS WAS farcical. But the British then felt and still feel that whatever happens it is necessary to keep the London committee alive. In their view, if peace can be maintained by accepting a fiction that fiction must be accepted.

To be sure, it has been charged that Great Britain has actually viewed with complacence the repeated violations of the nonintervention agreement, even that her concealed aim has really been to insure the victory of the insurgents.

These contentions cannot be proved; they are indeed very much open to question. It is much more likely that Great Britain has viewed with concern the failure of the nonintervention program, that it has been entirely sincere in its efforts to plug up the loopholes of the plan.

In British eyes the possibility of either a loyalist or of a rebel victory could be viewed with greater equanimity than the possibility of a European war.

• • • •

THIS REMAINS its position today. And if such a position means getting deeper and deeper into a morass of inconsistencies, the British government is apparently prepared to be as inconsistent as necessary.

Nothing has more clearly revealed this than the crisis arising out of the rebel blockade of Bilbao. The nonintervention agreement, as it happens, does not prohibit the shipment of food to either side in Spain. And since Great Britain has never recognized the belligerency of the insurgents there is legally, so far as the London government is concerned, no blockade of the Biscay coast.

Yet when faced by the prospect of forcing the issue or backing down, Great Britain backed down. It can be taken for granted that it decided on this course out of no fear of Gen. Franco. One broadside from the Hood which was sent to Biscay waters, would no doubt be sufficient to blow the rebel blockading fleet out of the water.

To force an entry into Bilbao might, however, give Italy a pretext to force an entry into Malaga, which happens to be blockaded by a loyalist fleet. At a time when Mussolini has apparently not yet made up his mind whether to send a large additional expeditionary force to avenge the defeat at Brihuega, Great Britain does not want to provide him with any pretext to pursue such a course. It still hopes to get the naval cordon established and in that way truly isolate the civil war.

Thus, while reasserting her determination to protect British shipping anywhere on the high seas, Great Britain has warned British ships not to go to Bilbao. It is admittedly a very unheroic position for the erstwhile mistress of the seas to take. Already it has caused some little gloating in Italy which is only too eager, at the present time, to enjoy the discomfiture of a rival. But for the time being Great Britain is determined not to be pushed into any position that might directly or indirectly result in the widening of the war zone.

• • • •

ESSENTIALLY Britain's position regarding Spain is no whit different from its position regarding Europe as a whole. She is playing for time because she believes that time is on her side. Today she is unprepared, or at least that is the belief in government circles in London, to take a strong stand on any question. When the $7,500,000,000 rearmament program has made greater headway there will be time enough for that.

Thus, although that rearmament program has already had widespread repercussions elsewhere in Europe, the British are determined not to count unhatched chickens.

As the British calculate, there is always tomorrow. Maybe they are right. But in the meantime what is left of the fabric of peace and of international law continues to be whittled away and there may be precious little left for Great Britain to save when tomorrow comes.

Henry James

By William Lyon Phelps

American Novelist.

The American novelist, Henry James, was born on this day, the fifteenth of April, 1843. He is thus 94 years old today, although he made his exit from the planet in 1917.

It is possible to have a great public and no fame; and it is possible to have great and enduring fame and only a small public. Henry James never had many readers in his earthly pilgrimage and he has not many now. But, if I may be pardoned for including myself in the category, every one of his devoted readers is intelligent. He may not be so much talked about as he was in 1878, when "Daisy Miller" appeared, but his fame was never so high as it is now, and it is certain that he belongs to the ages.

I remember I thought, before I met him, that he would be austere and aloof and difficult, because his books were like that. And what a joyous surprise! He was one of the most charming, really affectionate men one could ever hope to see. The first time I met him, we sat on the sofa together and he put his arm affectionately over my shoulder, as I told him how much I enjoyed reading his books. And a year later, when I saw him again in London, he was just as warm-hearted, just as affectionate.

I wish every one would read his early novel, "The American." And in all my life as a reader of books I have read only three novels that seemed to me artistically perfect, flawless—and they are "The American," by Henry James; "The Scarlet Letter," by Hawthorne, and "Fathers and Children," by Turgenev.

• • • •

And let me repeat what I have said before and shall say again—that Henry James's short novel, "The Turn of the Screw," is the most terrific ghost story I have ever read. My friend, Prof. Henry Perkins, of Trinity College, Hartford, agrees with me about this, with one reservation. He thinks that "The Beckoning Fair One," by Oliver Onions, is even more terrifying. He induced me to read it, and I am almost sorry he did. I shall not recommend it to my readers, because, really, you know, there is a limit to horror. "The Beckoning Fair One" is something so fearful that I advise you to read something else.

Japan Reconsiders

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

THE WEATHER-COCK of Oriental politics has again turned in the direction of Sino-Japanese rapprochement. First signs of the changing wind became apparent soon after the capture of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's "strong man," by discontented troops in distant Sian on December 12. The mutiny came as a shock to the Tokyo government, whose agents in China have completely failed to sense the strength of the anti-Japanese sentiment.

Tokyo realized that with Gen. Chiang as their hostage, the rebels could force the Nanking government to accept their demand for resistance to Japan. Wisely, the Japanese policy-makers then completely discarded their old strategy of intimidation in favor of honeyed declarations of undying friendship for China.

Politically, the move was the only one Tokyo could take in the circumstances. Renewed threats to Nanking would have been immediately utilized by the powerful Popular Front movement to organize a nation-wide anti-Japanese campaign. There were sufficient indications that such a movement would have been supported by both Soviet Russia, alarmed by Japan's inroads into Inner Mongolia, and Great Britain, eager to revive her declining fortunes in China.

A few days after Gen. Chiang's kidnaping, the Nanking government was officially notified of Japan's benevolent neutrality. This declaration was immediately followed by the cessation of attacks upon the Inner Mongolian province of Suiyuan by bands, subsidized and directed by the Japanese Kwantung army in Manchuria.

Conquistador Program Forced Hirota's Eclipse.

THIS "HANDS-OFF-CHINA" attitude was maintained by Tokyo all during its serious cabinet crisis of January and February. Premier Koki Hirota, the author of the famous "Three-Point Program," which would have given Japan undisputed control over China, was forced out of office. Gen. K. Ugaki, the soldier-statesman, was prevented from forming a cabinet by the army. Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, who six years ago helped to conquer Manchuria by sending, at his own risk, troops across the Korean-Manchurian border, was appointed premier. With the army's blessings he was able to form a conservative cabinet, definitely opposed to drastic reforms and new military exploits on the mainland.

In his first public pronouncement on Japan's diplomatic "New Deal" on February 15, Gen. Hayashi, who was then also acting as foreign minister, announced that, while adhering to the Hirota program, he would apply different methods in carrying it out.

A week later, Gen. Hayashi supplemented this with a definite declaration that Japan has no territorial designs on North China, which, he hoped, would "become safe for cultural and economic activities of Japan, China and Manchoukuo." The two existing pro-Japanese administrations in North China, he said, came into existence because of "special circumstances" and their policies "conform with Japanese desires."

This disavowal of territorial ambitions was supported by War Minister Gen. Sugiyama, who added that the army "constantly thinks of economic and cultural co-operation with China on the premise that Sino-Japanese relations are unbreakable."

Further proof of Japan's intention to make peace with China was contained in the speeches of the newly appointed foreign minister, Mr. Naotake Sato, before the Diet on March 8 and 13.

New Foreign Minister Indorsed Reconciliation.

MR. SATO expressed his sympathy for and appreciation of China's aspiration for equality with foreign powers and urged the resumption of Sino-Japanese diplomatic pourparlers in a spirit of equality and reciprocity.

"There has been too often the incorrect impression," he said, "that with sufficient pressure, any demand, no matter in what form or of what nature, may be forced down the throat of the other party in docile submission. Such a view excluded entirely the possibility of popular reaction which would render a diplomatic stalemate inevitable, to the detriment of both parties."

Japan's "superiority complex" in dealing with China, he boldly asserted, is the greatest obstacle to securing a fundamental formula for Sino-Japanese co-operation.

"It goes without saying," he said, "that our policy is to respect the independence of China and Mongolia. I do not believe that we should show hesitation in pressing our minimum demands so long as our atttude toward China is just. Third states will have no reason for being suspicious under such circumstances, and I believe that China will feel likewise.

"Our relations with China have reached such a point," he told the dumbfounded parliamentarians, "that my very ordinary assertion that we should deal with China on a basis of equality caused an extraordinary shock."

Mr. Sato's statement, which incidentally resulted in a bears' raid on munitions stocks on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, was paralleled by his ministry's official expression of "profound sympathy" with China's desire to abolish extraterritoriality.

This surprising declaration was apparently intended as a bait to the Chinese government, long determined to put an end to a system under which nationals of foreign powers, with the notable exception of Russia and Germany, are privileged to be tried in their own consular courts in China. This system has admittedly been abused by various foreign countries.

Tokyo Newspapers Seconded New Proposal.

IN STILL ANOTHER momentous disclosure, the leading Tokyo journals, in obviously officially inspired reports, predicted that Japan would abandon the "traditional" methods of seeking rapprochement with China in favor of friendlier gestures.

The foreign office, the press said, would discard six of the seven sweeping demands presented to Nanking last year by Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe. The sole remaining demand, that for the lowering of the Chinese tariff on Japanese-made goods, would be retained because of China's apparent readiness to entertain it in exchange for certain politcal concessions.

If this report were true, it signified the abandonment of the policy of "bluff, bully and bayonet" in favor of diplomacy patterned after the policy pursued by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

A striking confirmation of this belief was the fact that Japan's first envoys to China since the formation of the new cabinet were 14 leading financiers and industrialists, who came here for the purpose of making a new effort to effect economic rapprochement with China.

Although they denied it, the members of the mission were said by the Japanese press to have been instructed by the Tokyo government to seek a lowering of the Chinese customs tariff in exchange for a definite pledge that the Japanese army would withdraw its protection from the Korean and Japanese contrabandists in North China.

What the Japanese businessmen themselves feel on the subject was shown in an outspoken pamphlet written by Mr. M. Yoshida, manager of the Shanghai branch of the powerful Mitsubishi Bank, and distributed by the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Said Mr. Yoshida:

"Japan must renew her viewpoint on China, in view of the changed situation. China of today is not the China of several years ago, when Gen. Chiang Kai-shek alone was supreme . . .

"I am pessimistic of the future of Sino-Japanese relations. Now that their political and cultural relations are almost entirely disrupted, the only way to maintain their friendship is through economic co-operation."

Businessmen Joined By Press In Enthusiasm.

MR. YOSHIDA and his fellow business men were not alone in realizing that it was the army's policy of aggression which had forced Nanking to seek comfort and counsel in London, Moscow and Washington.

The Tokyo Asahi Shimbun declared that "reckless pressure on China would throw that country into the arms of the powers. There is need at this moment, in our opinion, for the reshaping of Japanese foreign policy."

"The main reason for the change in China's attitude toward Japan," the daily added, "is the growing confidence of the Chinese people in the future of their country. One year ago talk of eventual solution of the Manchoukuo question sounded like a dream, but now China seems quite confident that something can be accomplished."

Taught a hard lesson, Tokyo appears to be eager to call a halt to continental adventures. The government has committed itself to what Gen. Hayashi called a "policy of peace" and what one of Japanese Fascist leaders described as a policy of "conciliation, concession and kowtowing." No one can predict whether this new policy will be long-lived or not. But, hopefully, Nanking appears to be ready to meet Tokyo half way.

The last ambuscade in 1933, he said, resulted in the wounding of two passengers in his car, Bob Childers and Jim Bates, both union men.

Dwyer said one of his assailants was Unthank, whom he called "chief of the present sheriff's road runners or road killers."

George Ward, secretary of the operators' association, later told the committee he did not know what had become of Unthank, who, he said, had not collected his salary since the middle of March.

He reminded Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, he had "agreed to co-operate with the committee, but not actually to produce Unthank."

A story of arrangements for the dynamiting was outlined by Patterson, a limping, shaggy-maned miner, who said he was convicted and served ten months in the penitentiary for his part in the explosion.

Former Gov. Rub Laffoon then gave him "a full and free pardon," he testified, adding he had received a salary from Unthank throughout his imprisonment.

Five other men arrested with him were never brought to trial.

He asserted Unthank had complained because Dwyer "r asn't hurt much" in an earlier dynamiting, and wanted to "jar him up again."

Patterson said he hired Tackett to do the job, giving him 1" sticks of dynamite furnished by the chief deputy.

Says Attorney Involved.

Tackett, a lean, elderly guard for the Operators' Association, then took the stand to tell how he went to Pineville with Patterson and Baker and "floated aroun the beer parlors till about midnight."

He said they consulted the Bell County prosecuting attorney, Walter B. Smith, about the best way to get the dynamite to Dwyer's dwelling.

Patterson and Baker then told him to go away, Tackett went on, because he was "too drunk" to do the job.

He said he was paid $30 "to keep my mouth shut" and that Unthank looked after his family for six months while he was in jail, paid his salary for a year after his release, and let him use a company-owned house.

Clothed in overalls and a tattered white sweater, Tackett was brought into the hearing room by A. T. Pace, Bell County, Ky., deputy sheriff.

The prisoner testified he was held under a peace bond, and had recently been removed to the Clay County jail for safekeeping.

The authorities were "afraid some of those fellows would get a hold of me," he explained, but did not identify "those fellows."

Tackett told the committee he had been a deputy constable in Harlan County under former Sheriff John Henry Blair, and once had received $150 a month as operative for the Baldwin-Phelps Detective Agency.

Ward and Patterson also paid him at irregular intervals, he said.

Among the jobs he performed for Unthank, he testified, was the seizure of a man whose name he did not know in a Riverside, Ky., hotel.

"I helped run him out of the county," he said. "We slapped him a time or two and told him to get on away. Ben Unthank had him in the car the last I saw."

Baker testified that he had tried to get a man to kill Dwyer and was arrested after the explosion. He said Harvey Fuson, an attorney, was sent by the coal operators to defend him.

would be given no more consideration than any other of a score of revenue proposals.

Hearings were scheduled to begin Tuesday morning and to continue indefinitely. Ample opportunity to testify, the sub-committee decided, will be accorded all local civic and trade organizations.

The first meeting of the six-man sub-committee, headed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, was held shortly after the House District Committee at a hectic session voted to conduct three other local investigations based on complaints of members.

The triple inquiry will be directed, however, at organic laws rather than operations of agencies they affect. Three sub-committees will be appointed within a few days by Chairman Mary T. Norton to conduct the probes. Administration of the alcoholic beverage control act, the public utility law, and the more recent motorists' financial responsibility act will be the subjects of the investigations.

Transit Company Scored.

The rather vague inquiries were ordered after members had lashed the Capital Transit Co. for seeking higher fares while allegedly furnishing poor service, the A. B. C. Board for acting as debt collectors for wholesale houses, and the Commissioners for asking that the $100 damage minimum be stricken from the safety responsibility act.

The tax sub-committee meeting was attended by five of the six members, only Representative McGhee (Democrat), of Mississippi, being absent.

The sub-committee, still irked over their dispute with Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, decided to proceed without any special appropriation and to withdraw a request that $10,000 be inserted in the District supply bill by the Senate.

"Don't Want Their $10,000."

"We don't want their $10,000," Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, stated. Nichols was the committee member who led the fight for elimination of an appropriation of $15,000 for a survey by the District Commissioners when the bill was on the House floor.

Nichols suggested that the sub-committee give no more consideration to the nine local tax bills sponsored by Collins than to any other tax measures, including those proposed by the Jacobs committee.

"I think we should consider the Jacobs report, the Mapes report, and any others bearing on the subject and then pick the best ideas out of each," he said.

Treasury Aid Suggested.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, urged the sub-committee to set no time limit on the hearings and to give everyone concerned an opportunity to testify.

He suggested that the sub-committee consult tax experts of the Treasury Department before drafting its legislation and that it adopt the recommendations of special delinquent tax committees of citizens calling for the overhauling of the District's assessment and collection machinery.

"Why, it's as archaic as Noah's Ark," he said. "We can get additional money for the District right there if we modernize this system."

Donovan First Witness.

The tentative plan is to call Auditor Daniel J. Donovan as the first witness. He will be questioned, however, as to the estimated revenue that the various taxes will produce rather than be asked for his recommendations.

The District Committee tabled a bill which would make the service of women as jurors in the District on a par with that of men, although Chairman Norton had introduced it.

To prevent it being called up at a later date the committee voted, 6 to 4, that it shall not be reconsidered at the present session of Congress.

Memorial to Heroes of Titanic Disaster 25 Years Ago

The memorial to those who perished in the S. S. Titanic on April 14, 1912, stood lonely on the Potomac shore yesterday, just 25 years after the tragedy.

Tennessean Sells All, Gives to Poor, Fasts for 36 Days

Dunlap, Tenn., April 14 (AP).—Jackson Whitlow, 45-year-old farmer who completed 36 days of fasting today, said he sold his goods and pigs and gave the money to the poor, and would not eat again "until the Lord tells me to."

"I started this fast at the call of the Lord," he said, "and I'll not stop until His word comes to me."

Somewhat emaciated and with blotches on his face from "stomach misery," Whitlow said he had lost 25 pounds. The gaunt mountaineer lives with his wife—they have no children—in a log cabin at Stooping Oak, 19 miles below here, on coal mine property.

"I am just following the Lord," Whitlow said. "I prayed and said I would do whatever He told me. When He said for me to sell my goods and my pigs and give the money to the poor I did. Then He called on me to fast."

2 Fined and Jailed For Evading Tax

New York, April 14 (AP).—Convicted on charges of evading the Federal income tax law, Morris Seltzer, 50, and Manuel Goldberg, 48, president and treasurer, respectively, of the Empire State Paper Corporation, were fined $22,500 each and sentenced to three years' imprisonment today.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph W. Burns, calling it a case of "very great importance," said it was the first of its kind involving legitimate business men. The defendants were accused of evading approximately $68,000 in taxes.

"The President is accredited with stating that collections of taxes are not up to expectations," Burns told the court. "These men earned a million dollars in ten years, from 1920 to 1930, and paid trivial amounts."

Picketing Rules Set by Va. Judge

Covington, Va., April 14 (AP).—Judge Benjamin Haden granted the Industrial Rayon Corporation an injunction today prohibiting striking rayon workers from "interfering" with persons entering or leaving the plant, and limiting the number of pickets at gates to the property to six.

Titanic, Which 'Could Not Sink,' Struck 25 Years Ago Last Night

TITANIC SINKS; HUNDREDS DROWNED — WOMEN AND CHILDREN ARE SAVED.

Thus did The Washington Post of Monday, April 15, 1912, in one of its many extra editions, proclaim the greatest maritime disaster in history.

Last night, precisely at 11:20 o'clock, occurred the twenty-fifth anniversary of the collision of the White Star luxury liner Titanic, "the ship that could not sink," with an iceberg off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, 1,200 miles from New York.

There were 2,224 passengers and crew aboard the 60,000-ton vessel, the greatest afloat, on that fatal night as she steamed toward America on her maiden voyage, and only 711 were rescued alive.

Three hours after the Titanic crashed into the berg she had gone down to the bottom of the North Atlantic, the ship's band playing "Nearer My God to Thee" almost to the very end. To their common grave were carried a veritable Who's Who of American and European finance, industry and diplomacy.

Yesterday no public notice was paid the anniversary in the Nation's Capital for the tragedy is now but a hazy event with no known survivors still living here. Once a year commemorative ceremonies are held at the Titanic Memorial on the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, but they usually fall on or near Decoration Day.

It was far different, however, on the sad morning of April 15, 1912, and during the following days when the dead and the missing and the rescued were being tallied.

Washington lost Maj. Archibald Butt, military aid to President Taft; Clarence Moore, capitalist and social leader, and Frank D. Millet, the artist, who was traveling to Europe with Maj. Butt. Col. Archibald Gracie, now dead, prominent clubman and a graduate of West Point in 1882, was among the rescued.

There were a few more persons, transitory residents of Washington, who were saved but all apparently have died or moved to other parts, a hasty survey revealed yesterday.

Rites Held at Scene.

Still living in West Virginia is the former Lucine Hughes, daughter of former Representative James Hughes, of that State, who emerged safely from the disaster but whose bridegroom of eight weeks perished. She was put i to the same lifeboat with Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose famous husband was lost.

Simple but impressive rites were conducted yesterday, the Associated Press reported, at the spot where the Titanic sank.

To the firing of a rifle volley, a wreath was tossed upon the waters by the crew of the Coast Guard cutter which is now running the ice patrol in the North Atlantic. With her engines dead still and the church pennant raised to the masthead, the burial services was read by Commander Henry W. Cole, jr.

The Coast Guard patrol was a direct result of the catastrophe of April 14, 17912. Its motto is "Never another Titanic disaster."

Gehrke Ends Hibernation.

U. S. Ranking In Air Strength Drops to Sixth

Reich Moves to Fifth in Huge Increase, Spurs Europe Expansion.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—The 1937 edition of the Aircraft Year Book, published today, reports the United States has dropped from fifth to sixth place among the seven major nations in number of combat airplanes available "for an emergency."

The ranking, necessarily an estimate because of official secrecy, places the nations in the following order in relative combat plane strength: British Empire, France, Russia, Italy, Germany, United States, Japan.

The term combat planes, explains the annual, published by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, includes all armed planes, such as pursuit, bombing, armed scout and observation, armed patrol and transport and reserves.

Reich Increase is Largest.

The largest increase in recent years, according to the year book's statistics, has been in Germany, which advanced from seventh place with 600 units in 1935 to fifth place with 3,000 units in January, 1937.

Germany's air force program," the book comments, "has aroused Europe to the dangers of unpreparedness in aviation. The result has been that England, France and Russia have expanded their programs in an effort to maintain parity. * * *

"Secondly, all the secrecy of which the German military leaders are capable cannot conceal the fact that the Reich lacks many of the raw materials necessary to continued and prolonged production and operation of aircraft after a declaration of war."

U. S. Superiority Challenged.

The United States' decline in relative strength, the annual says, "alone would not be so important except for the intense research and development work which the others are undertaking. * * *

"While the superiority of American equipment is unquestioned at present, it is being challenged by the scientific efforts of the other powers."

	Jan. 1935	Jan. 1936	Jan. 1937
Britain	2,800	3,600	4,000
France	3,600	3,400	3,600
Russia	3,000	3,300	3,400
Italy	2,300	2,800	3,200
Germany	600	1,600	3,000
United States	2,060	1,900	2,200
Japan	1,850	1,800	2,000

D. C. Woman Held In Bank Shortage

Mrs. Elizabeth Wallis Pusser, who lived with her 11-year-old daughter, Patricia, at 1312 Fairmont street, will be returned by the United States marshal's office to Baltimore today to face the specific charge of violation of the national bank act.

Arrested Monday night at her home by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Mrs. Pusser waived a preliminary hearing yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. When she was unable to raise bond of $1,000 she was recommitted to Federal custody and lodged at the Woman's Bureau. Patricia was taken to the Receiving Home.

Shortages amounting to $3,000 are alleged in her accounts at the Highland branch, Equitable Trust Co., of Baltimore, during a bank examination last month. Mrs. Pusser had been employed there until recently.

Il Duce, Schuschnigg Will Confer April 22

Rome, April 14 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini and Chacellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria will meet at Venice April 22 to confer on mutual problems of the two nations, said an official announcement today.

It was pointed out that the close understanding between Italy and Germany concerning the Spanish crisis has stimulated both Austria and Hungary to seek frequent reassurances from Rome that the spirit of the Rome protocols—between Italy, Austria and Hungary—remain unimpaired.

D. C. Realty Board Bill Hearing Resumes Today

A public hearing on a bill to establish a real estate commission in the District will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock this morning in the House District Committee room.

Bob Burns Says

By Bob Burns.

Before you decide to take up a public career, you'd better be sure you're big enough to stand a little "heckling." One of those timid, long-haired fellas come through home one time lecturin' on the 'Philosophy of Life."

It was a pretty dry lecture and about half-way through it, the audience started to cough and squirm in their seats. Finally a voice in the back of the hall hollered "Throw that guy out—he's awful!" The speaker hesitated and turnin' to the manager, he says, "Do you think I oughta stop?"

The manager says, "O'h, no, that won't happen agin—that was the village nit-wit." The speaker says, "What makes you think it won't happen agin?" And the manager says, "Why, he only has one sane moment every seven years!"

Debts Mount As Providence Work Goes On

Washington's hospitals never close. Burdened with staggering deficits, they continue to care for ill men, women and children who cannot afford private medical care. This is the second in a series of articles picturing the plight of each of the nine united hospitals now issuing an appeal for help.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Tragedy and poverty-shackled pain endlessly stalks through the L-shaped corridor in Washington's oldest hospital, Providence, where an average of 4,600 persons in the out-patient department are given clinical care each month without charge.

As early as 7:30 each week-day morning, women with babies in their arms and children clinging to their skirts, and men of halting step and haggard appearance crowd through the doors leading to the dispensary. They will wait an hour, probably longer, to see the doctors. At 8:30, when the dispensary opens, they will form long lines leading to the desk where two clerks take their names and ask a few questions.

If they bring a card from the Central Admitting Bureau for hospitals, they will be taken care of as soon as possible. Otherwise, they may be referred to the social service division of the hospital, where it is determined whether they are eligible for free clinical service. Then, after they have been given their first treatment, they will go to the admitting bureau to get their "pass" for further care.

Steady Stream of Patients.

Up and down, all day long at Providence, go the three elevators—tireless stretcher bearers for ill persons in the hospital's in-patient department. Hours on end, a steady stream of patients are taken from the accident room downstairs to the operating room on the fourth floor, where nurses are on duty 24 hours a day, and to which a surgeon, an anesthetist and assistants may be called on a moment's notice.

Sisters of Mercy, moving from room to room through the hospitals in their white and navy uniforms, minister to the needs of a man with a gash in his head, a child with a broken leg, or a woman crushed beneath a speeding car without asking whether the patient can take care of the bill. They see that the emergency is met first and then make inquiries about financial arrangements later.

In a typical day, more than 100 prescriptions are filled in the hospital's pharmacy. From all these the sister in charge considers it lucky if she collects as much as $2 for the day's work. Approximately 2,000 prescriptions were filled last month.

Only Two Income Sources.

Providence Hospital has only two sources of income—pay from its patients and help from the Community Chest. For two years the Chest appropriation has fallen short of the need because District residents did not contribute enough money for the Chest to reach its goal. Yet, come weal, come woe, the hospital has continued to care for patients the same as before.

The result? Providence's deficit has climbed to the $30,000-a-month level. Equipment must be kept up to date so that doctors will continue to give their services. An X-ray picture must be made of a child's injured arm to determine whether it is broken, even though his parents cannot afford to pay the cost. A shot of tetanus antitoxin—price $1.50—must be given to a girl with a cut finger even if the bill is never settled.

In other words, the hospital which serves the majority of the poor in the Northeast, Southeast and Southwest sections of Washington; that has the largest outpatient department in the city, and is going deeper into debt each month, as it continues to serve people of all faiths, regardless of their ability or inability to foot the bill must have help.

Madrid, November, 1936. Night blankets the shell-scarred face of the Casa de Campo. Guns rumble with an ugly murmur ahead. Shells come with a reassuring whine from behind. Then chaos breaks loose about 22 trapped soldiers in a trench, isolated from the main force in the blood-drenched shambles of No Man's Land.

Seated at a conference in the Press Club, the lone survivor of the 22 last night told the tale. He is David MacKenzie, 20-year-old son of a retired British admiral and commander for three months of a British machine gun unit of the International Brigade.

"Several rebel forays were made to dislodge us," he said, "but our effective Lewis gun called a halt to such attempts. Apparently the enemy thought we were in large numbers, for no organized attempt was made to storm our position."

But the guns never let up. Shells fell all around. One struck a tree nearby, blowing MacKenzie in the air, giving rise to the erroneous report of his death.

And there were always the Moors. "They crawled on their stomachs toward us during the night," he said "It was difficult to see them, but we posted lookouts. After we got a few, the rest had little courage left to return."

The 22—reduced to 6—were isolated 36 hours before the loyalist main force advanced. Later, five of the six were killed or mortally wounded in action around Madrid's barricades or on Spain's many battlefronts.

The youthful son of Rear Admiral William MacKenzie left Edinburgh University, where he was a medical student, September, 1936. He arrived with a machine-gun unit of British volunteers in Barcelona and, with 5,000 other foreign anti-Fascists, was rushed within three weeks to the Madrid front.

"The situation in the capital was acute," he said yesterday. "Already Franco's bombardment of civilians had weakened morale!"

The international column arrived in the tense city November 5. Two days later it went into action.

"It was in the Casa de Campo," MacKenzie explained. "There we had our first baptism of fire. We were mostly raw recruits and we faced the well-disciplined Moors, who were the backbone of the rebels' first mass assault on the capital."

But the loyalist lines held. Employing the strategy of letting Moorish contingents break through in spots, the international column isolated them by the thousands and forced them to surrender or face annihilation.

That Moorish drive failed. Then Franco used Germans—regulars of the Reichswehr, MacKenzie asserts. But the rebel juggernaut that steamrolled from Toledo to the capital was soon battering in vain against the impregnable line of defense.

The loyalists have won the war, the international column veteran declared, predicting Madrid would be relieved within three weeks. He denounced British officialdom, which he declared was frankly pro-Fascist, explaining that Fascist victory would weaken France and veer her to the English orbit.

MacKenzie later spoke to a large gathering that filled the Press Club auditorium on his experiences in the Spanish conflict. Other speakers included Representative John M Coffee, of Washington; Ernesto Galarzo, magazine editor, and Senor Juan Miana, first secretary of the Spanish Embassy. Marquis Childs, author of "Sweden; the Middle Way," presided. Hundreds of dollars were collected to aid the loyalist cause.

Needy Court Wins Support Of Bar, Public

Advantages for Needy Are Stressed by Judge Cayton.

The proposal to establish a "poor man's court" as a branch of the Municipal Court was indorsed by lawyer and layman alike yesterday at a four-hour hearing before the Senate District Committee.

While there was a persistent demand for amendments and some opposition to the whole plan, the majority of the witnesses urged the committee to approve the bill in the interest of wage earners, poor persons, and the underprivileged generally.

Chairman William H. King, who sponsored the measure in the Senate, adjourned the hearing early in the afternoon as witnesses continued to appear. He scheduled a resumption of the inquiry tentatively for Saturday afternoon.

The major amendments proposed by advocates of the legislation were a reduction of jurisdiction from $100 to $50 and the elimination of a $25 costs which might be imposed on anyone filing "frivolous or vexatious claims."

Judge Nathan Cayton, who has been the leader in the movement for establishment of the Municipal Court branch, was the principal witness in its behalf.

Not Revolutionary.

"There is nothing revolutionary in this bill," he told the committee. "There hardly is a feature of the bill which has not been taken from tried and tested rules or statutes in other jurisdictions, including the 16 States in which small claims courts have been enacted.

"We believe that it presents a careful and thorough effort at solving the problems which underlie litigation or proposed litigation involving wage earners, poor people and the under-privileged generally.

"I wish to make it plain that it is not limited to persons wholly without means, but is intended to include that class of people who find themselves hesitant or frightened at court proceedings, or who because of pride or the inability to engage a lawyer too often fail to contest unjust claims and probably equally as often fail to prosecute honest claims for wages, debts, damages, or otherwise."

He explained that the legislation requires no additional appropriations or personnel, that present judges will rotate on the branch, and that the court will have jurisdiction to adjust by arbitration or conciliation all claims not exceeding $100."

Asks Approval.

"I appeal for your approval of this bill," he added. "I am anxious to prove that it is not true that the men with the longest purse always wins in our courts."

Among the witnesses who followed Judge Cayton in support of the bill were David Sokol, of the Lawyers Guild; Prof. John S. Bradway, of Duke University; Daniel Thew Wright, a former District Supreme Court justice; Mortimer Reimer, secretary of the Lawyers Guild; former Judge James A. Cobb; Thurman Dodson, former president of the Washington Bar Association; Sefton Darr, attorney, and Milford Schwartz, attorney.

J. Barrett Carter, Leonard Ganse and Leo N. McGuire, all lawyers, opposed the bill. George E. Sullivan, also an attorney, was waiting his turn to oppose it when the hearing was recessed.

Sokol submitted several amendments, including a reduction in the limitation from $100 to $50 and elimination of the penalty for filing frivolous claims.

He also proposed that no written pleadings or affidavits be required except the statement of claims and verification, and elimination of a section which would permit the court to recall a debtor once a month after a judgment had been obtained for examination regarding his ability to pay.

Night Hearings Proposed.

Dodson said that the small claims court would prove a boon to servants and other low-wage earners, many of whom, he said constantly lose their earnings because of a fear and perplexity of courts.

Sefton Darr pointed out that the night sessions would enable many workers to press their claims without losing wages.

Richard Harmon, who said he has defended 750 cases in which defendants were unable to hire counsel, attacked various sections of the bill and stated that 200 local lawyers have volunteered their services to aid the poor who have claims.

Robert E. Lynch, former assistant corporation counsel, strongly indorsed the proposal and predicted the lawyers soon will get tired of defending persons in Municipal Court without compensation.

William C. Hushing, appearing for William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke in support of the bill, and the Washington Housing Association submitted a brief indorsing it.

Expert Slashes Transit Line's Historical Cost

The struggle between the Capital Transit Co. and the Public Utilities Commission, begun yesterday morning, continued through the afternoon as B. M. Bachman, chief commission accountant, cut $9,000,000 off the company's estimate of historical cost.

Historical cost was, on Tuesday, defined by J. E. Heberle, vice president of the transit company, as "the cost to the original company of property used and useful in street car and bus operations."

At that time also, Heberle had estimated the company's historical cost at $37,527,953. Bachman yesterday declared it was only $23,469,676.

Earlier in the day Fred A. Sager, chief commission engineer, had cut $10,000,000 off the company's estimate of reproduction cost (the amount which would be required to reproduce today the company's present equipment).

Sager's total was $42,162,403. The company's had been $52,486,638. Sager had included in his estimate all the company's assets with the exception of land, working capital, cash, materials and supplies.

Today more commission witnesses will be called. Harry Scantlin will estimate land values, and Guy M. Carlin, working capital.

Next week will be devoted to cross-examination by both sides. At the end of the present valuation hearing, a rate hearing will be held, at which the commission will judge the company's demand for increased token fares.

Neighborhood Tiff Over 'Dog Traps' Amicably Settled

The Duffys and the Wellses were reconciled yesterday and the publicity-making rat trap feud was brought to a finish.

Both sides gave ground in the Corporation Counsel's office in Police Court and an amicable settlement was reached.

The short lived controversy began Sunday when the traps were discovered on the Wells' lawn. Wells said they had been placed there in an effort to preserve his shrubbery and flower beds from neighborhood dogs.

Duffy said the traps constituted a menace to his son, Sonny, and Sonny's dog, Paddy.

Federal Charges Follow Alleged Clash With U. S. Marshal.

Ruby Downs, 54, for a 29 years a patrolman on the Metropolitan Police Force, was suspended from duty yesterday following an alleged assault on Michael E. Broderick, a United States marshal, who swore out a warrant charging the patrolman with interfering with a Federal officer in line of legal duty.

Downs pleaded not guilty to the charge before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday. Bond was fixed at $2,000.

According to Broderick, on March 20 he was assigned to go to the home of Mrs. Emily B. McCoy at 1219 Orren street northeast, to recover the child of Mrs. McCoy, estranged from her husband, when Patrolman Downs appeared at her doorway and attacked him. He had a writ of habeas corpus.

Broderick said he fended off Downs' blows, then returned to his headquarters without the child, Nancy Anne, 9, who is still in her mother's possession. The writ was obtained by the girl's father, Channing H. McCoy, salesman with the Connelly Outdoor Advertising Co., 54 Independence avenue southwest.

After Broderick swore out a warrant against Downs, the patrolman was arrested at his precinct, No. 7, while in uniform, the warrant being served by Deputy Marshal Clayton D. Gasque.

Addition to this schedule gives this city three daily departures for Florida. Eastern Air Lines reports the largest business to Florida this year in the history of the company.

Study Made Of D.C. Work For Women

Labor Department Surveys Conditions to Guide Board.

When the District minimum wage board is appointed next month to administer the wage law for women just revived by the Supreme Court's decision, it will have data from a survey by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department on wages, hours and working conditions here to guide its action, it was learned yesterday.

The survey has already covered more than 7,000 women employed by hotels, restaurants, department and ready-to-wear stores, curb service cafes, factories, laundries, dry cleaning establishments and beauty parlors.

It is possible that the survey, begun March 18, will be extended to cover private telephone switchboard operators as well, it was said at the Women's Bureau. It already possesses adequate information on the wages, hours and working conditions of telephone company operators.

Employers Plan Moves.

Meantime, a canvass yesterday of business men's associations and individual employers revealed that Washington's pay roll powers are busily engaged in working collectively on policies to be followed when minimum wage regulations are readopted.

Committees of the hotel, restaurant and laundry dry-cleaning employers' associations are meeting almost daily to lay out strategy for any development.

The Women's Bureau survey was instituted at the request of the House District Committee, which had been petitioned by a group of local clubwomen. The latter urged the survey as the first step toward drafting of new minimum wage legislation for Washington women.

When the Supreme Court on March 29 upheld the validity of the war-time wage act, which had been declared unconstitutional in 1923, the movement for a new wage law was dropped, but the bureau's labor survey continued without interruption.

Results Uncertain.

Spokesmen for the hotel, restaurant and laundry associations were united yesterday in their statements that "we're studying this thing thoroughly, but we still don't know, of course, what is going to happen."

The present wage law exempts domestic workers but applies to all women and minors in "industry, business, trade or branch thereof."

When the wage board, of which Jesse C. Adkins, now a District Court judge, was chairman, was dissolved 14 years ago its rulings applied to an estimated 12,500 persons. The approved scales were $15 in laundries and dry cleaning places; $15.50 in the printing and publishing industry, and $16.50 for women in mercantile houses, hotels and restaurants.

According to 1930 census figures, 25,000 women and minors in Washington would have benefited by the law had it been in effect in that year. It is believed that the figure would be at least 50 per cent greater today, considering the influx of women to the Capital since 1933.

Editors' Chief Lauds Pictures In Journalism

Marvin H. Creager Points to Newspaper Advance; Group Meets Today.

Greater emphasis on pictures is the most significant development in modern American journalism, Marvin H. Creager, editor of the Milwaukee Journal, said here yesterday. More and better pictures are being used, he said, and the result is brighter and more informative newspapers.

Creager, who "broke in" on the Kansas City Star under the late William Rockhill Nelson, is president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, which today at 2 p. m. opens its fifteenth annual convention in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

"There has been a tremendous improvement in newspaper photographs and in their handling," Creager said. "The Associated Press Wirephoto service is largely responsible. It has made us picture conscious. We are now able to give readers the story both in pictures and in words, even though it be thousands of miles away.

Seek Action Pictures.

"There was a time when pictures were regarded as incidental. That is no longer the case. On our own newspaper, we have three experts whose sole job it is to direct the photographers and handle the pictures. American newspapers today are not satisfied with stereotyped portraits or lifeless news shots. They seek pictures that help tell the story, pictures with character, action or beauty.

"Along with the improvement in photography, there has been a notable improvement in photo engraving. In the future, I believe, you are going to see more and more newspapers using Sunday rotogravure sections in color."

Looking over the newspaper field in general, Editor Creager saw a distinct improvement in the handling of news. The day of the fake and the hoax, he said, seems to have passed, and with it the reporters and editors who delighted in perpetrating them.

Tricky Reporting Past.

"The reporter with a box of tricks is out of place in the newspaper world today," Creager said. "Nowadays it is not enough to know that when a man bites a dog it is news. Your newspaperman has to be posted in politics, in economics and in the problems of the day. If he is not a college man, at least he must be interested to the extent that he will make a study in these fields."

Creager said there had been a marked improvement in foreign news, and he attributed this to the fact that American correspondents are kept at their posts in Europe and elsewhere for long periods. One of these correspondents, Webb Miller, European news manager of the United Press, is to address the editors at their Saturday morning session.

One fault that Creager saw in the American newspaper field was a growing tendency to "departmentalize" newspapers—to segregate news and features, fencing off a page for women, another for children, and so on.

Eliminates Elasticity.

"The danger here is," he said, "that you do away with the elasticity of your newspaper. Sometimes there is a struggle to find enough worth-while stuff to fill a page. But after it has been made up, we frequently find the news editor running around with a live news story and no space in which to play it."

Discussing the case of the newspaper versus the radio, Editor Creager said that it ought to be clear by this time that there is no conflict between the two. It has been found, he said, that the brief radio news broadcasts only serve to whet a person's curiosity for the more detailed story in his newspaper. Any doubt on this score, he said, is dispelled by the steadily growing circulation figures of American newspapers.

Philippine-U. S. Study of Trade Begins Monday

Will Prepare for End of Preferential Status; Committees Named.

By the Associated Press.

A committee of experts will start Monday a study of future Philippine-American trade in preparation for ending existing preferential relations.

The group, as announced by the State Department yesterday, comprises six Americans designated by President Roosevelt and six Philippine representatives named by Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon.

It begins work, the announcement said, under direction of Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State.

A proposal by Tuezon that the independence promised by Congress be advanced from 1936 to either next year of 1939 is to figure in the study by the committee, which is to "recommend a program for the adjustment of Philippine national economy" with separation from the United States in view.

Trade Pact Proposed.

Quezon has proposed that trade agreement with an independent Philippine government be substituted for the economic provisions of the independence act. This provides quotas for Philippine sugar, coconut oil and cordage in the interim prior to political freedom.

The independence act provides that beginning in 1940, the Commonwealth shall impose an export tax of 5 per cent of the prevailing United States duty on all Philippine products shipped to this country. The proceeds are to be retained by the Commonwealth treasury.

The export tax is to be increased by 5 per cent each year until, by 1946, it will amount to 25 per cent of the prevailing American duty. After the islands achieve complete independence all Philippine goods will be subject to the full United States duty.

The American members of the committee are: Joseph E. Jacobs, chief of the State Department's office of Philippine affairs and chairman of the American group; Louis Domeratzky, chief of the regional information division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Commerce Department; Lynn R. Edminister, chief economic analyst of the State Department's trade agreements division; Col. Donald C. McDonald, assistant to the chief of the Insular Affairs Bureau of the War Department; Carl Robbins, assistant chief of the sugar section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; Frank A. Waring, senior economist of the Tariff Commission.

D. C. Attorney's Suit Is Clarified

In a story appearing in The Washington Post of April 5, it was inadvertently stated that William Cogger, a member of the District bar, had lost a suit to have the District's personal property tax declared invalid. It was stated the Supreme Court had declared the law constitutional and enforceable.

It appears now that Cogger lost his suit in the District Court to have the law declared unconstitutional; that the United States Court of Appeals approved the opinion, but did not pass upon the constitutional questions involved, and that the United States Supreme Court refused to review the case, thus in effect upholding the lower court ruling.

Cogger, through his associates, Philip F. Biggins and John E. Hughes, stated that the unconstitutionality of the intangible taxing act of the District is "now before our local courts for decision." The point Cogger wishes stressed was that the legality and constitutionality of the act has never been passed upon and that he is advising clients the act is unconstitutional.

'Good Earth' Goes a Third National Week

"The Good Earth," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's imposing picturization of the novel of the same name by Pearl S. Buck, will be continued for a third week at the National Theater as a "road-show" attraction. The costellar roles are played by Paul Muni, as Wang Lung, and Luise Rainier, as O-Lan. These two were the winners of the Academy awards for the best screen acting of 1936. They are ably assisted by Walter Connolly, Charles Grapewin, Tilly Losch, Harold Huber, Jessie Ralph and an ensemble of thousands. The production is one of the most notable of the year.

Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Shirley Ross and Martha Raye will be seen in the principal roles of "Waikiki Wedding" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. They will be supported by George Barbier and a noteworthy list of supplementary players. The scenic investiture of the comedy-romance is a source of great visual beauty. The musical score also comes in for a word of praise. It affords the star and his associate players many opportunities to burst into lilting song. The bill will be completed by the usual short-reel subjects and "News of the Day."

"Call It a Day," the Warner Brothers' screen transcription of the stage comedy of the same name by Dodie Smith, will be the chief feature of the film bill at the Earl Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The roles created on the stage by Philip Merivale, Gladys Cooper and Jeanne Dante will be played on the screen by Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescourt and Bonita Granville. A strong cast apears in support of the principals. On the stage the vaudeville bill will be headlined by that charming songstress, Jane Froman, who comes back to town after a long absence. Other stage acts will round out the program.

Ann Harding and Basil Rathbone are cast in the costellar roles of "Love From a Stranger," which will come to the screen at Loew5s Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. An English cast of distinguished ability supports the stars in this melodramatic thunderbolt. There is a climax to this picture that neither can be foreseen nor disclosed in advance. Glen Cray and his Caca Loma Orchestra will provide the stage entertainment at the Capitol for the new week. Many specialists make up the personnel of this splendid band, which is no stranger to Washington's musical tastes.

At the RKO-Keath Theater, beginning tomorrow, the attraction on the screen will be Universal's production of "Top of the Town," in which the principal roles are played by Doris Nolan, George Murphy, Hugh Herbert, Gregory Ratoff, Gertrude Niessen, Ella Logan, Henry Armetta, Mischa Auer, Ray Mayer, Claude Gillingwater, Richard Carle, Ernest Cossart and a long list of others. The musical score of this filmusical is one of the most engaging that has come along in months.

"Swing High, Swing Low," co-starring Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, will return to the scren of the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this subject Miss Lombard sings and Mr. MacMuray plays a very mean trumpet. The bill will be completed by short-reel subjects and a full 15-minute newsreel. Charles Butterworth and Jean Dixon lead the supporting cast.

James Stewart and Simone Simon will renew the downtown popularity of "Seventh Heaven" on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater beginning tomorow, where the remade version of the original Charles Farrell-Janet Gaynor success will be continued after a successful week on the screen at Loew's Capitol. Jean Horsholt, Gale Sondergaard and others of note lead the supporting cast.

Next week at the Rialto Theater, beginning Sunday afternoon, the chief feature of the screen bill will be "The 39 Steps," in which the principal roles are played by Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll. As a companion attraction the Rialto will present Jessie Matthews in "First a Girl."

That Stalwart Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," starring Norma Shearer, with Charles Laughton, Frederick March, Maureen O'Sullivan and others of note, will be revived at the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday afternoon.

Glen Echo Park, Washington's free-admission amusement center, will throw open its gates for the 1937 season on Saturday. All of the attractions will be in operation with the exception of the Crystal Pool, which will not open until May 27. More than 50 entertainment devices contribute to the appeal of this famous park. Dancing, all manner of exciting rides and a variety of other diversions compile a complete roster of hits for fun seekers.

In addition to the usual 40 minutes of newsreel shots from all parts of the globe, the Trans-Lux Theater next week, beginning tomorrow, will present "Trees," based on the lyrics of Joyce Kilmer's song; "Bar-Rac's Night Out," a nature study, with Pete Smith commentating; "Stranger Than Fiction" and "Let's Go," a marching melody made famous by Harry Richman.

The Gayety Theater announces as its major attraction for the ensuing week, beginning with the usual Sunday matinee, Nadja, the sensational Russian artiste who has taken burlesque by storm. Nadja will be starred in an all-new Independent Burlesque Association show which will further feature the Arabic charmer, Zonita, and her company of entertainers.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Bert Granoff, Carolyn Henry, Dean Herrick and Bob Stickney Go Far Into the Night After a Grueling Day; the Belasco Theater Will Revert to Picture Policy, Following a Disappointing Season of the "Legit;" Pleasant Callers Drop by the Drayma Desk; Notes of the Amusement World.

THE stamina and versatility of the people of the theater always have constituted a source of wonderment to this column.

I remember back in the old days when Taylor Holmes, recently here at the Belasco in the role of Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road;" Julius Tannen, occasionally seen in character bits in films, and the late Jack Hazzard used to roll impromptu audiences in the aisles for hours on end at the National Press Club and at private parties to which they had been bidden with no thought that they would turn spontaneously into the life of the occasion. But that is what they always did.

BELL.

A master of every dialect that the tongue of man ever has contrived, as well as the staccato art of stuttering, Taylor Holmes is probably one of the most engaging comics the theater has furnished the drawing rooms. He can do anything—and generally does.

The father of Phillips Holmes, the popular young juvenile of the cinema, Taylor Holmes looks no more than half the age that must be his. When he was here in "Tobacco Road," he stopped by the desk for an hour or so and panicked this department with the humorous recital of some of the experiences he had encountered during a tour through the South in the Jack Kirkland dramatization of the Erskine Caldwell novel. There is more to Taylor Holmes than reveals itself upon the stage in a given part. His resourcefulness as an entertainer knows no bounds.

That used to be true in the old days, too, of Julius Tannen, famous vaudeville monologist and later character actor, who started out in life as private secretary to Phillip D. Armour, head of the meat packing Armours who brought fame to the Chicago Stockyards.

I have seen Julius Tannen tie an informal audience in stitches by the wide variety of diversion he was able to summon on a second's notice—and without resort to card tricks or legerdemain. He was strictly an auricular entertainer. But how he could entertain!

The lamented Jack Hazzard, coauthor of "Turn to the Right," produced years ago by John Golden, was another who recognized no limitations to the breadth of his humorous appeal. Jack could go on all night, if anyone cared to hear him—and somebody always did.

All this is brought to mind by the fact that recently a considerable group of local entertainers were taken over the jumps, as the saying goes. It was only a few nights ago that Bert Granoff, Carolyn Henry, Dean Herrick, Bob Stickney and Audrey Sieber, from the Earle Theater, after having done four shows on the stage, contributed to the entertainment of the A. A. U. banquet at the Mayflower, in honor of President Mahoney, of the national organization, came down to the Variety Club rooms in the Willard Hotel and sang and played their heads off—almost literally—for a roomful of tune-hungry wolves who would have kept them going all night with a little more prodding.

It all reminded this column of the remote days of an earlier incarnation, when Rudy Wiedoft, Don Bestor, Dan Breeskin, Elias Breeskin—Barney, the Barnee of the Shoreham, was just a kid in arms at the time—Nate Brusiloff, Milton Davis, Kate Smith, the Three Radio Boys, Eve Esmond and Pat Grant, a dance team from Keith's; Whitey Kaufman, Fred Waring and his brother, Tom, and all the rest of the boys and girls used to congregate in your reporter's office and put on whoopee.

Among yesterday's agreeable caliers in the tesselated elegance of the drayma department were John Montagu, doing a little Grade A cymbal-whanging for Jane Cowl and her return engagement in the National Theater on the 26th, and Helen Hoerle, one of the theater's most able distaff stentoresses, who comes to town in behalf of Ruth Draper and her distinctive "character sketches."

These are two of the most articulate people who come along during a season and it always is a pleasure to greet them. I am desperately afraid that you will be hearing something else about Jane and Ruth before it can be said that very much "time is wastin'."

The Belasco Theater, as an outlet for the artistic enterprises of Jules Leventhal, seems to have passed into the limbo of negation, as we say in the better circles. While the old firm of Wee and Leventhal did fairly well as occupants of the Lafayette Square playhouse a season ago, Mr. Leventhal, on his own, seemed to click only one week out of six. The aforementioned Taylor Holmes, in "Tobacco Road," returned him and Jack Garrison, local house manager, their only profitable week.

There were one or two plays that it seemed to this department ought to have done better than they did. I refer to "Hey, Diddle Diddle" and "Hitch Your Wagon." There were the bases here of potential box-office attractions, if the sponsoring bankrolls had held out. They apparently didn't.

The Belasco now will revert to a picture policy, so it is said, and will return Jack Thoman to town as house manager—which will be glad news to the drama desks who have to deal, week in and week out, with this sort of thing. Jack is a good boy.

• • • •

That was quite a bill they had at the President Mahoney banquet in the Mayflower Tuesday night—practically all of the entertainers appearing in the local theaters presenting stage shows this week, including Willie and Eugene Howard from the Earle. These are two veterans of the boards that any program ought to be proud to get. The Mahoney crowd, headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley, was proud. That is as it should have been.

Idle-Thought Note.

Go Into a Third Week at Earle

Reading in the customary direction, these amiable young people are Carolyn Henry, brilliant soprano; Bert Granoff, Washington's favorite tenor, and Dean Herrick, master of the console of the pipe organ, who tomorrow enter their third week as a star act on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Their program will be entirely different from those presented during the first fortnight of their engagement on Thirteenth street—which, incidentally, represents a homecoming for Mr. Granoff.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, April 14.—Settin' around (MGM): Spring is well under way, and summer is hobnobbing with prosperity "just around the corner:" Everybody on this lot is talking vacations. Clark Gable and Robert Taylor are planning a mountain lion hunt together (can't you just see all the mountain lionesses panting with anticipation), and may even venture in search of a grizzly bear. Wallace Beery, with his wife and adopted daughter, is all set to bundle into his new trailer (a rolling mansion) and motor down the coast until he reaches a quiet spot, there to spend three weeks basking in the sun and surf-fishing. His "quiet spot" will remain such only until folks learn a movie star is in their midst.

ROBERT TAYLOR.

Myrna Loy, least gypsy-minded star in the colony, has no yen to leave town. Facing a six-week vacation, she will stick around her new home and add knick-knacks and gadgets. She says she wants to get acquainted with the place. You know, despite Myrna's talents, I still insist she was sent to this world to be a home body.

Madge Evans is planning an unusual sort of holiday. She owns property which has shown signs of gold, and she will go prospecting. William Powell and Jean Harlow have antithetic vacation notions: Bill wants to find a lonely spot, leagues from Hollywood, and do nothing but rest. Jean says, "Nothing to do is bad for me. I'm going places and do things!"

I have heard of queer tricks to teach dogs, but none more odd than that Luise Rainer has taught her Scottie. She told me about it when I visited her dressing room just off the "Emperor's Candlesticks" set, and saw her dog stretched at her feet. Studios frown on canine set-visitors because their barks spoil costly scenes. But Luise's pet is apparently an exception, and I asked how she keeps it from barking. "I taught him to hide when he hears the word, 'Quiet.'" She explained, "So when a director yells it, my dog scoots under a divan or chair and keeps very still."

Trust actors find ways to amuse themselves during the weary waits between scenes. On the "They Gave Him A Gun" set, Spencer Tracy and Franchot Tone engineered construction of a miniature golf course. The hazards consist of stools, cables, up-ended furniture, rope coils, and what-nots. Empty film cans set at intervals serve for holes.

Franchot holds the low-score record, with Cameraman Hal Rosson (Jean Harlow's ex) second. I had a try at it, skimmed a ball past Tracy's portside ear, and quit. Spencer is too husky for me to take chances with.

In the lunch room, I stopped to swap greetings with Myrna Loy. She was wining and dining an interviewer, and I suddenly remembered how she greets each person who comes to write about her. "Let's go," she says "No holds barred, except my married life. That," she adds, dryly, "is for my diary."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 14.

BEN HECHT and Charlie MacArthur had planned to essay more of their Katzenjammer stunts in their new play—but, fortunately, production was called off. One of the play's characters was to shout: "Let the rain fall on every sinner here!" A sprinkler system in the theater then was to pour drops on every patron in the audience! . . . The report is that no love was lost between Darryl Zanuck and Winnie Sheehan when Zanuck took command of the Fox movie lot. On that lot now is a broken fountain, placed in a square used for parking cars. The water has been shut off and the basin is full of discarded match boxes and lot litter. "That fountain," they whisper, "is the 'Winnie Sheehan Memorial Fountain!'"

She had returned to her home and wrote the scripts which Sheila Barrett will use for the Vallee program, and Helen Mencken for the Kate Smith program.

THE HERALD TRIBUNE by-lined a story by Geoffrey Parsons, jr., who is covering the General Motors strike in Canada. This is a triumph for young Parsons, whose father is a member of the editorial board of that newspaper . . . A number of years ago young Parsons was a classmate of Dick West and Lucius Beebe at Harvard. He secured a job here for West, the capable editor of the Harvard Crimson, and who now is assistant night city editor at the Herald Trib. He also sent Beebe to his father, who hired God's gift to champagne and El Morocco . . . But when Geoffrey Parsons, jr., applied for a job in New York, his father exiled him to the Boston Globe for six years, refusing to hire him until two months ago.

SATURDAY NIGHT Amy Mollison toured the night clubs with Donald Flamm and Gloria Bristol. At 1 a. m. the aviatrix stated that she was too sleepy and was going home . . . "Well," the flyer explained, "when I'm in a plane I'm going somewhere, but in a night club—where'm I going?"

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 14.

THERE are a lot of spring symptoms here in this mass of stone and steel, but probably the most reliable of all is the arrival of the Big Show. Heralded by that fabulous press agent, the venerable Dexter Fellowes, it always comes to Madison Square Garden (which grows only cauliflowers) at this season, agitating the pallid city youngsters and filling the newspapers with the customary balderdash.

ALICE HUGHES.

Personally I never get the kick out of the big show here that I do when I see it under canvas. It seems to me that a circus belongs in a tent, with its wonderful backstage lot, for such shows are gypsies, and seem to me to lose their true vagabond character under a permanent roof.

Then, too, I have a very sentimental feeling about Ringlings', for I used to haunt it in the great days when wonderful May Wirth was riding, and Alfredo Codona had just arrived to show us the last word in aerialism, and Con Colleano worked on the wire. Most of all I miss the glorious little Lillian Leitzel, one of the finest and most interesting women I have ever known. Ever since she fell to her death in the ring in Denmark the circus just isn't the circus.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We played host, very briefly, to the brother of the Son of Heaven with the Gilbert and Sullivan name, Prince Chichibu, and his attractive wife. What did they do? Precisely what everyone else does—went to Radio City, surrounded by about a thousand of our most beauteous policemen, and then had their pictures taken on the roof of the Empire State Building, with dear old Al Smith pointing out the Jersey shore, as he has done thousands of times for the cameraman. Then the Nipponese royalties sailed away on the Queen Mary, headed for the well-known coronation.

• • • •

Incidentally, the big Cunarder also took away about the last of the enormous herd of titled Britishers who have been enjoying our poor American hospitality at Palm Beach, Aiken and other vulgar whistle stops. They had to get back and polish up their coronets and things for the approaching ceremonies . . .

• • • •

Thousands of girlish hearts here practically stopped beating when the "news" arrived that Errol Flynn had been wounded by a machine gun bullet in Spain. Fortunately the whole thing proved a mere rumor, and normal ticking was resumed. My helpmate, who views movie Dream Men, with far too little respect, says that Mr. Flynn's feelings were probably hurt by machine gun fire, and that the same thing happened to him several times during the World War, especially when the lead came from a diving airplane . . .

• • • •

I learned an interesting note at the annual convention of the Travelers' Aid Society, that worthy organization which meets all trains here. They tell me that during the past year more young men than girls sought advice and protection when they arrived amid the alleged perils of the Great City. Which gave me my daily chuckle, in spite of an attack of spring fever.

• • • •

Fashion French, that small collection of cliches which includes such words as "chic" and "soignee," gets a new phrase by way of Marlene Dietrich. She is being blamed for the birth of "Suivez moi," or "Follow me," which is to be attached to all Glamor Girls. So we either have "Suivez moi" or we haven't. Personally, I feel that the whole matter is so much spinach.

Early Furniture CharmReflected By Adaptations

By Ethel Ehlen.

THE CHARM and grandeur of the colonial furnishings in the Williamsburg, Va., Galleries, recently restored, has inspired a number of prominent furniture manufacturers to create adaptations of the pieces suitable for use in modern houses and apartments. These settings, faithful to the original, not only copy the furniture, but also the striking color schemes; any of which could be transferred to Washington rooms with lovely effect.

Included in the group of adaptations, now on display in a local store, is furniture like that of the Wren room (named for the famous Christopher Wren room at William and Mary College); Elizabeth Carter alcove, Gloucester room, Berkeley dining room, Dixon room, Raleigh room (replica of the dining room of the famed Raleigh Tavern), Alice Paige bedroom, Susanna Allen bedroom. Williamsburg, in the past, an exponent of the art of gracious living, today thus feeds the cultural spirit of Americans who have a feeling for background, lovely surroundings and hospitality.

Colonial Influence.

It is significant that in an age of hustle and bustle, nonsentimental and loud-voiced, the leisurely, hospitable manner of the eighteenth century is again coming into vogue. Added to this is the current unprecedented popularity of colonial furniture, particularly in Washington, which has never accepted the modern in any large degree. The various early colonial pieces, which the manufacturers have adapted to the comfort and utility demanded today lend themselves as well to modern rooms as to the old houses with delightful atmosphere, which abound in this vicinity.

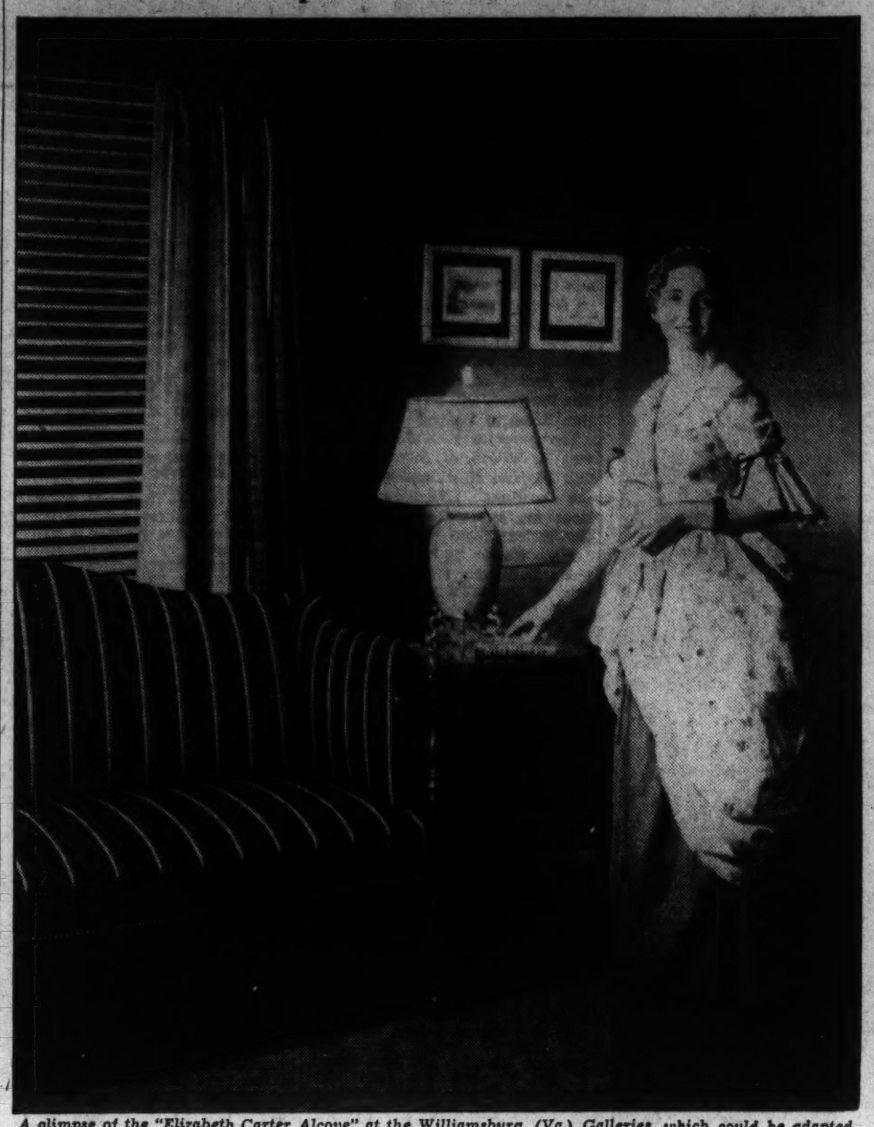
In the present age of color, it is interesting to discover that the early American woman knew color and achieved fascinating effects. There is plenty evidence of this, in what was called Colonial Virginia. For instance, in Gloucester room, Williamsburg, the lead gray walls were accented by a richly marbleized wallpaper, soft lead blue window draperies of satin damask, and a soft gleam from the old yellow Chinese Spode and Lowestoft lamps. Rose, beige and old gold upholstery was chosen for the furniture and the same tones were repeated in the rug.

Reflects Hospitality.

Hospitality is especially noted in the large wing chairs, comfortable sofas, Chippendale coffee tables. Choice furniture designs so characteristic of the age and colors that blend in so beautifully with fine mahogany are again in vogue in the new-old dining room furniture pieces. Bedrooms, flaunting four-poster beds of mahogany, suggest daffodil yellow walls, off-white and yellow patterned draperies, a blue rug, brick-red upholstering for the chairs, Spode and Lowestoft lamps.

Due to this new colonial revival, it would seem that the current trend is toward more comfort rather than smartness; furniture which is really livable and not just placed in the rooms for effect, or to fill some empty space. Taking a cue from the alluring color schemes of early American rooms, as presented at Williamsburg, it should prove a delightful adventure in color and charm to emulate themes selected by discriminating and artistic women of the eighteenth century, and apply them to modern designs for living.

Colonial Inspiration for Modern Rooms



A glimpse of the "Elizabeth Carter Alcove" at the Williamsburg, (Va.) Galleries, which could be adapted to your own house or apartment. The lovely color scheme includes eggplant walls and ceiling, blue-green and yellow striped damask draperies, antique and yellow-green upholstery, beige-gray rug, and lamps repeating the blue-green note in the Chinese bases.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Human Weight.

The fact that the papers have been full of descriptions of the Alton giant recently reminds us of another form of human exception, equally embarrassing to the owner unless he happens to want to go into the show business.

There are two forms of dwarfs. One is called achondroplastic. These are seen frequently on the streets of any large city. The head and trunk are normal in size; the arms and legs are short. "Achondroplasia" means change in the cartilage of the joints, and in these individuals the normal growth of the cartilage in the long bones is checked. The fingers and toes are flat and stump. Dachshund and Pekingese dogs have been bred to be achondroplastic dwarfs in the dog kingdom.

Not Thyroid Gland.

These dwarfs have nothing the matter with the thyroid gland, and probably nothing the matter with the pituitary gland, although the latter is the seat of the growth hormone. They are intelligent and capable of reproducing normal children. Probably nothng could be done to increase their growth hormone and even if begun early in life.

The other form of dwarfs, called ateleiotic, are simply small all over and perfectly proportioned. There is no unnatural size of the head or trunk. They are usually not capable of reproducing children. They are also usually intelligent, however. On account of their generally well-proportioned diminutive features and because their tiny faces and hands are quite handsome, they are the ones that are chosen for circuses and sideshows.

Whether anything will be able to be done with these latter patients when the growth substance of the pituitary gland is perfected is problematical. There is one case on record of a perfectly proportioned little girl who stopped growing early in childhood, and under the influence of the growth hormone gained consistently in height. And Prof. Evans, of the University of California, who has done so much work on the growth hormone, told me that when he used it on Pekingese and dachshund puppies he did not make them any taller, he just made them more like dachshunds and Pekingese.

The smallest dwarf on record, measured by the naturalist Buffon, was 16 inches in height.

The stories of famous dwarfs are legion. Geoffrey Hudson was presented to Charles I in a pie. He fought several duels, one with a turkey cock. The original Tom Thumb is supposed to have lived in King Arthur's court. His prototype, the one exhibited by Barnum, was born in 1832 in Bridgeport, Conn. His principal stunt, on which he prided himself, was his expertness in kissing ladies. In England alone he claimed to have kissed a million. He married a dwarf and had one child, who died at the age of 6 months.

The pygmy races, mostly described in Africa, are not true dwarfs, having an average height of 4½ feet. Their diminutive size is undoubtedly due to heredity, and they have many other hereditary stigmata, such as extra toes and fingers.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

Making Guests Feel Individually Welcome Is Secret of Success as Hostess.

MAKING guests feel they are individually welcome is the secret of success as a hostess. In a city like Washington, where so many large functions are held and where the matter of rank frequently arises, it is especially difficult to see that no guest is neglected or made to feel unimportant.

The question of seating guests calls for great tact. That all hostesses do not possess this tact is evidenced by the following letter:

"Dear Miss Wallace: I am going to give a luncheon party and expect to have the guests seated at small tables. I only intend to have place cards for my important guests, those of official and social importance, and the unimportant guests can find seats for themselves. I am told that this procedure is followed by many Washington hostesses. Do you think I will hurt the feelings of the unimportant guests?"

No Guest Unimportant.

In the first place, a well-bred hostess never considers any of her invited guests unimportant. If they are important enough to be invited they are important enough to receive an equal share of courtesy with the most distinguished guests.

It is quite customary to have luncheon served at small tables and not to use place cards. But it is not good form to select the guests who are to sit at one or two tables unless because of their official position or some other reason that would give them precedence over the others. It would be proper to single out official guests, heads of organizations, the family of a bride and bridegroom or relatives of a guest of honor in this manner. It is never proper to make this distinction on the basis of social position or lack of it.

One of the most successful Washington hostesses who often entertains at luncheon using many individual tables has a system of asking members of her family and close friends to preside at each of the tables. These "assistant hostesses" invite the various guests they would like to have and whom they think would be congenial to sit at the tables with them. This can be done in a quiet and unobstrusive manner. But when this system is employed there must be a hostess for every table, or some guests might think they were catalogued as "unimportant." This hostess also watches very carefully that any of the guests who would not know many persons at the party is especially looked after, requesting members of the family or friends to see that they have seats in congenial groups.

Query—Recently I attended a party with my aunt, who is an official in a large organization. Every one came up to greet her and introduce her. Although my aunt introduced me a number of times, most of the guests at the party ignored me entirely. When it came time for the seated supper at small tables, my aunt was asked to the head table, but I was left to find a seat for myself. As I was a stranger at the party, I did not have a very good time. I consider the other women, most of whom knew each other, were very rude. They did not treat me as a guest at all. At the entertainment after the supper I remained standing in the rear of the room by myself, as I did not have a seat.

Answer—This was all probably an oversight, but, of course, a very uncomfortable one for the victim. Those in charge of arrangements should have been sure that the stranger in their midst was as comfortable as possible. It would have been a very gracious act, since you did not make a place at the head table with your aunt, to ask you to sit at another table with some of the ranking members of the club, and to see that you had a seat for the entertainment.

Exposition Designs Inspire Dressmakers

Paris.—Parisian dressmakers and modistes have been inspired by the intricate designs and the riot of colors which will be seen in the gardens of the Paris Exposition opening in May. They are drawing heavily upon this interesting source for some of the newest and smartest styles of the year.

Flowers will be the dominant fashion note, particularly in hats. Every chic young woman who attends the exposition will want one of these gay and giddy hats, for there will be much al fresco—or semioutdoor dining in the attractive restaurants, large and small that dot the banks of the Seine.

Cooking Herbs Can Be Grown In Small Plot

All Hallows Guild Has Model Garden of Savory Leaves.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

THE MOST PRONOUNCED food vogue of the moment is the use of herbs in cookery. More and more the housewives of Washington and the country are becoming herb conscious. Now spring is here and thoughts turn to gardens large or small, suburban or city.

Washington is fortunate in that it has a center of herb interest in the Cottage Herb Garden, conducted by All Hallows Guild, the garden guild of Washington Cathedral in the Cathedral Close. Hundreds of homemakers as well as pilgrims from all parts of the country visit it daily in order to get acquainted with herbs and their use as shown in living plants clustered in the Cottage Herb Garden and the dried herbs used for flavor and fragrance.

A specimen kitchen herb garden in a square little plot about 6 by 4 at the Cottage Herb Garden in the Cathedral Close displays to the visitors how much in an herb line can be done in a little space of "good earth." No matter how small one's back yard may be such a space inhabited by herbs—"man's noblest heritage of green" as a noted writer has called them—will bring rich rewards of flavor and fragrance and enrich the daily diet of the family immeasurably.

In such a kitchen herb garden—6 by 4—one may grow the aromatic "Sweet Marjoram," which mingles delightfully with every type of food and also in potpourris; the chives plant, the most delicate member of the onion family; sage with its many kitchen uses, as in stuffings and salads; thyme, with its piquant flavor and erect sturdy branches; basil, the king's plant, divine in salads and possessing real affinity with tomatoes; rosemary, something to remember in salad or with roast lamb; parsley, that queen of herbs, whose history is lost in antiquity; tarragon, excellent in salad, and used to give vinegar a tang no one will forget; mint for juleps and for sauce; and yes, the tasty savory mingling alike with steaks, stews, chops, soup and a multitude of other foodstuffs.

Roast Leg of Lamb a la Rosemary.

Cut a slit in the leg of lamb, place in it a good sized sprig of fresh rosemary or a teaspoon of dried rosemary, if the fresh plant is not available. Sew up the slit, then put the leg of lamb in the oven, basting it occasionally with olive oil.

The whole family will rise up and call the cook blessed when roast leg of lamb a la rosemary is served.

Mrs. Helen Morgenthau Fox, sister of Secretary of the Treasury enry M. Morgenthau, in her excellent book, "Gardening With Herbs," has presented many admirable herb recipes for her readers. She has adapted the following recipe for eggs with sweet herbs in ramekins from John Evelyn's "Acetaria."

Eggs With Sweet Herbs in Ramekins.

4 eggs, cooked in shells until hard
2 tablespoons of mixed fresh herbs (thyme, basil, summer savory, sweet marjoram and parsley)
2 tablespoons of butter
Salt and pepper
2 raw eggs well beaten
½ cup of cream

Remove eggs from shells and mince finely

Cook the herbs in butter for five minutes, being careful not to brown the butter. Add to this the minced cooked eggs, salt and pepper, well beaten raw eggs and cream. Fill well buttered ramekins with the mixture and bake for 20 minutes. Serve at once.

Use for Basil.

A simple way to use basil, not to give one of the fairly well known tomato recipes, is to combine with green peas. After cooking enough peas, say for a family of four persons, keep the pot hot on the back of the stove, adding butter and one teaspoonful of basil to it. It should be kept on the stove ten minutes before serving it.

Mary Chess, the noted herb specialist of New York, in an attractive little book of herb recipes, gives the following one for savory rice which employs that useful herb successfully.

Savory Rice.

(A Luncheon Dish.)

1 cup rice
3 tablespoons of butter
2 onions (finely chopped)
2 teaspoons chervil
2 teaspoons summer savory
2 teaspoons of parsley
1 teaspoon of marjoram.

Cook the onions in the butter for five minutes. Add the rice and herbs, and cook until the rise is slightly browned. Add a little water (or stock is better) and cook until the rice is tender and the liquid has been absorbed.

This is a good stuffing for chicken or duck, adding a tablespoonful of grated horseradish when the rice is cooked.

It also makes an excellent stuffing for baked tomatoes, peppers, or eggplant.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Wife Who Has Solved All Her "Big Problems" Unaided Now Asks Help on Some Little Ones.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have managed to solve all my big problems by myself—although I must say it has put a wrinkle here and there in my brow to do it. Now I just want a few tips on etiquette which I can't seem to find in any book. First: When my husband brings home men friends to supper I'd like to know some polite way of absenting myself after supper, when they adjourn to the living room to "talk things over." I know they would be glad if I did, and I know I would like to go to bed early.

• • • •

As it is, even though I manage to putter around in other rooms to keep out of the way, still I feel as if I must remain up to say good night—and they stay all hours. We have a three-room apartment, so I can't very well get lost. I love to have my husband's friends to supper, but I hate to sit around afterward. And I haven't any children to use as an excuse for a getaway.

• • • •

Another problem: when getting off a street car, do I go up the aisle ahead of my husband and then step aside so he can get off first and assist me out? I see so many girls lumbering off the car by themselves, with the man following. It doesn't look right, and yet to date I have never seen anyone following the procedure I have outlined.

• • • •

A third question: We live on the second floor of an apartment building and the stairway leads directly downward from our door. Is it necessary to accompany our guests to the first floor when they are leaving?

Well, I can't think of anything else that stumps me. Thank you in advance for your advice. The best compliment I can give you on your column is to say that men read it and respect your advice. And if you are familiar with the average male's reaction to "lovelorn columns" you know that is something!

My husband used to poke fun at me for reading your column every morning, but after I had read aloud a few excerpts to him and after he had surreptitiously read a few himself, he came to the point where, over his morning grapefruit, he now remarks: "What does Mary Haworth have to say today?" In a very respectful tone, mind you! Thank you again. WOMAN READER.

The Proper Gestures.

DEAR WOMAN READER: When you have seen to it that your husband's men friends are comfortably settled in the living room after supper, with cigars, cigarettes, ash trays and drinks (if any) within easy reach, say something to this effect: "Well, gentlemen, I don't need anybody to tell me that a woman is superfluous here. So if you will excuse me I think I'll go to bed with a good book." Or, "So I think I'll be off now and write some long-neglected letters." Or, "So I think I'll retire to my own room and catch up on the family darning." The company will no doubt protest your going (while secretly blessing you for the tact which prompts your withdrawal), but go. You can stop in the doorway to say how much you've enjoyed their company at dinner, and express the hope that they will come again and soon. Then say good night to each and be off.

• • • •

I should say it was proper, because inconspicuously protective, for a man to precede his woman companion along the isle of a street car when making for the exit. For one thing, the aisle may be crowded and he can clear a pathway for her; for another thing, if the car is jostling along in a manner likely to throw her off balance, she can more easily clutch at him for support, and for a third thing, there is no sparring for position when the moment comes to alight. He is on the platform ahead of her, ready to extend a helping hand.

• • • •

In large apartment buildings with elevator service, many gracious hostesses habitually accompany their guests to the elevator and ring for the conveyance. In such instances, last good-bys are said while waiting for the elevator to make its appearance. However, in a small building of the sort described, it seems preferable to me to say good-by to one's guests in one's own living room or reception hall. To follow one's guests downstairs is to clutter up the premises unnecessarily and more good-bys would have to be said in a public vestibule.

• • • •

It's nice to hear that your husband reads and respects my opinions. I must confess that my self esteem as a columnist has been buoyed up no little by the fact that an increasing number of men of all ages are writing me for help with their problems. However, it is not altogether surprising that they should recognize this department as an exception to the old-time "lovelorn column," for the reason that it was conceived and has been maintained for the purpose of giving honest, dignified consideration to all kinds and varieties of human problems. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Salt and Pepper Sets Made in Amusing Style

Paris (U.P.).—All sorts of amusing salt and pepper sets are being made in silver for the modernistic dinner table. Enormous poker dice are used for one set; another is made of squatting bull frogs. Another is a pair of silver dogs—a Scotch terrier for pepper and a wire-haired terrier for salt. Still a fourth set is a pair of tiny silver sailing vessels.

Silhouetted Scotties Effective As Design on Kitchen Towels

SCOTTIE'S a "busy little body" when it comes to keeping house, which behooves you, likewise, to get busy and embroider a new set of tea towels for your kitchen. There's inspiration aplenty in these seven droll motifs, so wonderfully effective when silhouetted by the use of a single color floss. There's sure to be a bridal shower, birthday or other occasion for which this set is gift-worthy. In pattern 5652 you will find a transfer pattern of seven motifs (one for each day of the week) averaging 4½x7½ inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Two-Colored Slippers Used for Night Wear

Paris (U.P.).—The vogue of wearing evening slippers of two different colors has been launched in Paris by the well known couturier, Paquin. He shows one bright orange sandal and one in bright green with a simple black chiffon evening dress whose only trimming is a long orange and green scarf that is thrust about the shoulders with the long ends trailing to the floor.

GOOD TASTE IN DRESS

POUNDS off your figure, years off your age! That's the illusion your clothes can create, just as Mrs. Smart's do. But, choose the wrong lines and you'll look as awkward and heavy as Mrs. Dowdy.

The lines of Mrs. Smart's costume make the eye travel up and down to give the impression of slenderness. Hat with upward sweep and high trim. V-neck with slender clip to take away the pudgy throatline. Shoulders slightly built out and just enough fulness at hem to detract from the hipline. Finger-tip length jacket of the same dark silk as the dress, with up-and-down lines in the weave.

Mrs. Dowdy hoped her schoolgirlish frock—which cost more than Mrs. Smart's costume—would make her look younger. But the square neck calls attention to her chunky throatline. High waistline, flared peplum, stand-out sleeves, bands across skirt, print design which leads the eye across, make her look inches wider. Cheeks bulge beneath her tiny pillbox hat.

Our 40-page booklet, "Secrets of Being Well Dressed," tells lines and colors most flattering to each type. All about style and fabric. Dress better for less money; spend 15 cents to save $15.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Secrets of Being Well Dressed," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Cummings and Mrs. Farley Entertain at Season's Final Cabinet 'At Homes'

Postmaster General's Wife Receives in Mayflower Dining Room.

By Dudley Harmon.

The final Cabinet "at homes" of the season yesterday were smaller than the previous ones. Hundreds turned out for the earlier ones, but yesterday little more than a hundred made the rounds. Those receiving were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General.

The home of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, where the latter received yesterday, is one of the most beautiful in Washington The drawing room furniture is upholstered in needlepoint, and on the sea-green walls of the dining room hang many handsome old portraits. Between the two rooms is a library with comfortable chintz chairs and sofas.

Mrs. Morgenthau received in the drawing room, wearing a long gown of soft green crepe and a corsage of gardenias. Assisting her were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, in a gown of pale blue with long, full sleeves; Mrs. Stephen Gibbons and the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche, who wore a black suit with a silver fox scarf and a smart black and white hat.

Cherry Blossom Bouquet.

Pouring during the afternoon were Mme. Ertegun, who wore a black silk frock with blue trimming at the sleeves; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Morrison Shafroth, in a rose-colored frock and hat; Mrs. Russell Ryan, who recently came to Washington from Indianapolis; Mrs. James Roosevelt, in a black red-lingot over a spring print and a a beige-colored straw sailor hat, and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, in navy blue and lavender.

Among those present at this "at home" were Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, whose black coat was trimmed with silver fox; Mrs. Herbert Feis, of the State Department, in a gray tweed suit; Mrs. Stanley Brown, Mrs. John R. Ash, Mrs. William Franklin Sands, Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. Edward Burling, the Misses Patten, Mrs. Charles Wilson, Mrs. William Elliott, Mrs. John B. Martin, Mrs. Charles Brand, Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Henry Blackiston Wilkins.

Mrs. Cummings Receives.

Ruthven, the home of Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings, was the setting for another of the "at homes." Mrs. Cummings, gowned in pale gray chiffon, the square neck of which was caught at either side with brilliant clasps, received in her drawing room, where clusters of flowers in pastel shades were arranged effectively in tall vases and here and there were sheafs of calla lilies, the hostess' favorite flower.

In the dining room, the long tea table was decorated with three crystal globes, containing clusters of yellow roses. These were arranged on mirrors, at the sides of which were small porcelain Democratic donkeys

Brilliant Audience Hears Pan-American Concert

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A brilliant audience gathered last night at the Pan-American Union for the concert by the United Service Orchestra, with the Brazilian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, Mme. Bidu Sayao, as the guest artist of the evening. The program was the final event in observance of Pan-American Day and included a brief message by the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull.

The ballroom, where the concert was held, presented its usual colorful setting. Three groups of flags of the American Republics were massed against the white walls in front above the platform on which the Service orchestra played—the red uniforms of the Marine members repeating the red in the flag. Outside the building, also, waving flags proclaimed a festival day.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Bueno do Prado, who had a party of 30 guests with them at the concert, entertained later at an informal reception at the embassy in honor of Mme. Sayao. The Ambassador, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, and Mme. Aranha have not yet returned from their extended visit in Brazil. They are arriving tomorrow in Miami, and Miss Zazi Aranha has gone by plane to meet them.

Senor Melo Franco, former Brazilian Secretary of State, who is here for the Conference on International Law, was one of the distinguished Brazilian guests. Mme. Sayao's mother, who was here for the concert, and two other interesting Brazilian visitors were there. The latter were Mr. Obilon Azevedo, noted actor, and his wife, Mme. Dulcina Moraes, who plays with him. They are in this country to study our theater and came to Washington for yesterday's Pan1American observance, and also to extend their thanks to Mr. Sumner Welles and Mr. Lawrence Duggan; of the State Department, for the assistance given them through the Federal theater project.

Among other of their guests were the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, Mrs. John T. H. Mitchell, and her daughter, Miss Anne Mitchell, of Greenwich, Conn., who are here for a few days; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban; Senorita Marta Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador; the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen, and the Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation and Mme. Parazic.

Assisting the host and Mme. do Prado in making the guests welcome were others of the embassy staff. They included Mr. Decio de Moura, Mr. Paulo G. Hasslocher and Mr. Fernando Lobo.

As members of the diplomatic and official set arrived, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, stood at the door to greet them. From the Cabinet were Mrs. Hull, who arrived with the Secretary; Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Claude A. She was with her parents, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos.

The Cuban Ambassador, Senor Pedo Martinez Fraga, and the Minister Counselor of Embassy and Senor de Baron were in the audience, as were the former President of Panama and Senora de Alfaro; Senorita Olga Patterson, daughter of the former Cuban Ambassador, and the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, who wore a long, black velvet military cape, with gold clasps over a black velvet gown.

Two members of the audience who aroused much interest were the representative of Indian affairs to London, Mr. Syed Rashid Zamon, and Sir Tiroz Khan Noon, representative of the Indian government to the coronation. Both wore their picturesque native turbans, and with them was Mme. Abdollah Entezam, wife of the Persian delegate to the textile conference. During the intermission Sir Tiroz was in conversation with Mrs. Bernice Fleming Holland.

Mrs. Copeland Writes Book About Washington Society

Senator's Wife Started Work Two Years Ago in Hospital; Publication Dedicated to Two Grandchildren.

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland, is author of a new book about Washington society, which is to make its appearance May 10. "Mrs. Copeland's Guest Book" is the first she has ever written, and also has the distinction of being kind in its treatment of people and events in the Capital.

Mrs. Copeland began it when she was in the hospital in Florida two years ago, following the auto accident in which she was injured seriously. She has used the names of people in her own guest book and not only tells about them, but gives practical pointers on pleasant entertaining as she goes along.

The Senator's wife, in her new role as an author, insists her book will have "only nice things to say about nice people, for I don't know any other kind in Washington. Those I do not like I do not invite to my home, nor do I accept their invitations." The book is dedicated to her two grandchildren, Ruth Spalding and Virginia Alice Copeland, small daughters of Mr. Royal S. Copeland, jr., of Sufferen, N. Y. Mrs. Copeland told something of the nature of it at a small luncheon given yesterday at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Copeland, one of three children of Mr. and Mrs. Major May Spalding, of Cadillac, Mich., attended St. Mary's School in Knoxville, Ill., and later majored in piano at Northwestern University. She played in the Theodore Thomas Concerts and was accompanist for the Chicago Opera for a time. She and Senator Copeland were married since 1922, and maintain an apartment in 1908. They have been here ment at the Shoreham as well as a home in Florida.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Well, well!—what an interesting trio of gentlemen we saw yesterday at luncheon in the Carlton Hotel. Before we go on and give the names we better had hasten to add that the three were not all at the same table. Mr. James A. Farley, our Postmaster General, and Gen. Hugh Johnson were enjoying their noonday snack and talking, over their coffee cups. And, some distance way sat John L. Lewis. Now, wasn't that an important triangle, but just imagine the consternation caused, had they even so much as paused and exchanged—say—a dozen words.

What a nice surprise shower and tea Neitah King gave yesterday afternoon for Agnes Sholes who will be sailing soon for Europe, Milan, to be exact, and her marriage to Aaron Ireland Sanson 3d. Just as all the girls were sitting about enjoying their tea and cookies, Helga Schultz and Sylvine Clagett left the drawing room only to return with a hamper, all decorated with dainty little parasols and garden pots. That was not all, by any means, it was chock full of linens, wee tea napkins, guest towels, and all of those attractive things that are dear to a future home-maker.

Among the others at the gay and delightfully informal party were Eula Council, Margaret Sampson, Jean Macklin—and of course, Janie Belle Sholes, sister of the bride-to-be—Betty Galt, Fanchon Aldridge, Dorothy Highfield, Randy Richardson, Betty Marsh and Lilita Dawson.

Patience Gibson and her luncheon committee for the Fairfax Hunt Annual Horse Show have had their heads together for the last month and have come to the conclusion that no matter how interested the spectators might be in horses, they cannot forget their growing appetites, especially this time of year. So-o-oooo—about 30 members of our younger set, attired in stunning sports togs, will peddle sandwiches, salads, coffee and what-will-you, not to mention barbecue gadgets hot-off-the-roaster.

There has been considerable mystery shrouding the floor committee for the dance to be held the evening following the show, but as all things eventually leak out, here are the lads who will do their bit to insure a grand and gala time for all—Joe Heinrich is in command and is assisted by Frank Govern, Bill Blum, Herbert Bryant, Charles Clarke, jr., Humphrey Daniels, North Fletcher, Sterling Harrison, Bill Hoge 3d, Jim Keith, Tannar Kinnier, Tony Luebberman, Snuffy Lynn, John Lynham, Hugh Marsh, Bob McCandlish, Douglas Phillips, Charles Pickett, jr., Charles Pierce, Johnny Pugh, Jack Reybold, Hugh Riley, Alden Sibley, Doug Smith, Steve Spingarn and Bill Wilbur.

Little Bunny Stine, small son of the Harry E. Stines, has a mind of his own—he and his family frequently go to the Little Tea House for Sunday dinner and when the waiter comes around, armed with menus, Bunny immediately launches forth into a warning that he will eat anything but—"No strings beans or carrots."

After a dinner not so long ago, he was wandering around making friends with some of the other guests when he met Hazel Edgar. Now there is a combination! Looking up into the bright face of this clever person, Bunny allowed as how he liked brown eyes. Hazel, returning the compliment (she has brown eyes), said that she much preferred blue ones. Whereupon the little gentleman replied "Blue eyes are much harder to keep clean."

Aimee Says She Engaged as Lawyer Man Her Daughter Loved; Tiffs With Her Mother at Trial of Roberta's Suit for Slander

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 14.—It was love—and love alone—that prompted Aimee Semple McPherson to engage Jacob Moidel, burly Ohio lawyer, as an attorney for her tabernacle, the evangelist testified here today.

The love in question was that of her daughter, Roberta Semple, for Moidel, the thrice-wedded Mrs. McPherson explained under cross-examination in a $150,000 slander suit in which she is a defense witness.

The suit was brought by Roberta against Aimee's chief legal adviser, Willedd Andrews, who, Roberta charged, accused her of "blackmailing" her mother last fall.

Yesterday Mrs. McPherson told the court Roberta and Moidel combined to force her to sign some contracts she "knew were against God's will."

In an effort to refute this statement regarding Moidel, an attorney for Miss Semple asked Aimee today if she had not of her own volition retained Moidel to represent her.

"Yes, for one or two isolated cases, but not as the attorney for all the temple affairs," she replied.

"And when you hired him, he didn't force you to do that, did he? He didn't have a dagger at your throat or a gun at your breast? You did it of your own free will, didn't you?"

"Yes, I wanted to please Roberta. "Roberta had fallen in love with Mr. Moidel. So when Vivian Denton filed her slander suit against me, I asked Roberta if Mr. Moidel, being an attorney, couldn't handle the case for me. I wanted to throw a few little things his way because she was in love with him."

During the day. There was a short, sharp exchange between Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, who had not spoken since they quarreled and parted nearly 10 years ago.

As they passed each other, Mrs. Kennedy said something to the evangelist about Roberta.

"No, I'm not," replied Mrs. McPherson.

"Yes, you are," snapped Mrs. Kennedy, "saying she was a good girl." Mrs. Kennedy emphasized the "was."

"I'll explain that she is a good girl," Mrs. McPherson said.

"You'd better, because if you don't I will," Mrs. Kennedy replied, "I want you to tell the truth."

Both women returned to their respective chairs, flushed and breathing hard.

Fainer at first moved that the reply be stricken from the record. On second thought, he asked that it remain.

"Those were your words," he said. "Maybe they were the ravings of a maniac."

Sit-Down Delays U. S. Liner Sailing

New York, April 14 (AP).—The United States liner President Roosevelt, scheduled to sail at noon for Europe with 217 passengers, was held at her pier tonight by a sit-down strike of 33 engine room workers.

The strikers said they would refuse to work with seven replacements who had not supported the insurgent strike that split the International Seamen's Union last winter.

Joseph Mason, a fireman, charged the "old union" with sending "bowboys and taxi drivers" to fill vacancies on the ship. Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, stepped into the breach by delgating the board's chief examiner, John D. Moore, to try to arrange a settlement.

Social Security Act Increases Tattooing

Chicago, April 14 (AP).—Sailors, stevedores and sideshow freaks no longer have a corner on the tattoo market.

Social security numbers have changed all that, the needle and ink entrepreneurs agreed today.

Persons in all walks of life, they said, have taken to the social security numerals—indelibly inked on their epidermis—as a handy means of identification.

Women as well as men are going in for this fancy spread eagle tossing a social security number from its beak, they said.

Pick Winner of 1937 Pennant? Try It!

By Shirley Povich.

Being a portrait of a baseball writer trying to pick the pennant race:

Takes off his coat, beats himself around the chest looking for a pencil, can't find one, and being too lazy to hunt further, decides he doesn't need a pencil anyway . . . wonders whether he should pick the Yankees to win and be done with it, or should he try to be smart and try to call an upset. . . . figures if he picks the Yankees there'd be no credit in it anyway, but hesitates at making a bum out of himself by picking another club. . . .

POVICH.

Decides to pick the Yankees and then murmurs whathaell, why be trite about it . . . is tempted to pick the home-town club but hasn't got the nerve . . . thinking of the home town reminds him he's late with that expense account and mentally resolves it'll be the next thing he does . . . knows damn well it won't but it makes him feel better to promise himself that he will . . . curses the sensitive hangnail on his typing finger and wishes he had a scissors . . . tries to bite off hangnail . . . ouch! . . . and decides to leave hangnail alone . . . but still wishes he had a scissors.

Caddies and Civic Pride.

Tilts back chair, looks at the ceiling, tilts chair forward again, runs hands through hair . . . turns head and finds self looking at self in mirror and wonders if he's lost all his Florida tan . . . decides he has and after all, what of it . . . hopes the hotel forwards that sweater he left in Florida and suddenly recalls choking up on that 2-foot putt on the eighteenth . . . would like to get his hands around the throat of that caddy who told him to use a spoon instead of a four-iron . . . mentally resolves never to take the advice of any caddy again.

Tilts back chair and takes long look at ceiling . . . Oh, yes, the pennant race . . . decides not to be a fool but go ahead and pick the Yankees . . . decides he won't pick the Yankees, just for the hell of it . . . will pick Detroit . . . then figures if he can conscientiously pick Detroit he has just as much license to pick Washington . . . only finished a half game behind Detroit last year . . . sure, why not? . . . decides to pick Washington . . . decides that would be very foolish, with the Yankees in the same league . . . decides not to pick Washington . . . Cleveland, with Bob Feller, might do it . . . yeah, might, that's all.

Begins to realize he is getting nowhere with great rapidity and makes up his mind to haul off and pick the Yankees and let it go at that . . . suddenly recalls they haven't signed Charley Ruffing yet and without Ruffing they aren't the Yankees . . . funny about that Ruffing having only two toes on his left foot . . . shot off three of 'em in a hunting accident . . . probably mistook 'em for something . . . that's what they always tell the coroner . . . decides that's a pretty weak gag, but won't recall it.

A Bum Joke.

Reaches for a cigarette, can't find one . . . would be nice to have a smoke . . . searches in vain for one of last night's stubs and silently curses dumb maid who insists on emptying the ash trays . . . runs fingers through hair and lays self 2-to-1 bet he'll come up with a gray one . . . assorts dozen fugitive hairs and finds three grays . . . hastens to mirror fearing the worst and is not disappointed . . . wonders why they call it distinguished-looking.

Well, to pick the pennant race . . . no more trifling now . . . tells self to go to work . . . rubs hands some more . . . decides it would be no fun to pick the Yankees and begins to appraise the other clubs . . . one by one, he eliminates all of 'em . . . Detroit: No pitching and Hank Greenberg's bad wrist . . . Cleveland: A leaky infield . . . Washington: There again it's pitching . . . Chicago: Heavens, no . . . Boston: Excuse me, please . . . St. Louis: Don't be a fool . . . Philadelphia: Are they still in the league?

Tilts chair back, braces knees against desk and takes long look at ceiling . . . notes funny doo-dads and fanciful figures cut by the cracks in the plaster . . . finds 'em infinitely more interesting than pennant predictions . . . there's always tomorrow.

Miss Rawls Takes 22d Swim Title

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—Slender Katy Rawls, of Miami Beach, Fla., retained her national indoor 300-yard individual championship with the greatest of ease in the Lake Shore A. C. pool tonight to account for a new record total of 22 A. A. U. championships.

By winning as she pleased over Hattie Taylor, of the Athletic Club of Columbus, Ohio, the versatile little star from Florida broke a tie with a pair of famous stars, Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, of New York, and Helen Madison, of the Washington A. C., Seattle, Wash., at 21 each. During the remainder of the annual meet she will seek three more indoor championships.

Wins Easily.

Miss Rawls did not extend herself until the free style section of the race, and finished in 4 minutes, 6.4 seconds, a tenth of a second slower than her own meet and American record established a year ago. She trailed Miss Taylor through the breast stroke and backstroke legs, but turned on the pressure at the finish to win by about ten feet.

Harriet Vance, of Peoria, Ill., and Virginia Hopkins, a teammate of Miss Rawls, finished third and fourth, respectively, far behind the leading pair.

Claudia Eckert, of Chicago, made it a perfect evening for defending titleholders, but had to stage a dazzling closing spurt and set a new meet record to conquer Halina Tomska, of the Detroit Athletic Club, in the 100-yard free style final.

Sets Four Marks.

Waldemar Tomski, of the University of Michigan's national collegiate and Big Ten championship team, a brother of Miss Halina Tomska, swam 100 yards in 54.2 seconds, to win an exhibition event over Jay Brown, of the Lake Shore Athletic Club, by a half-yard. Bob Mowerson, another Wolverine, was second, with Chuck Wilson, of the University of Chicago, fourth.

Adolph Kiefer, back stroker and Olympic champion, wrecked four American records in a test against time. He was timed at 3:53.4 for 300 meters, 16 second faster than the listed mark of 4:09.4, set by George Fissler, of the New York Athletic Club, in 1927; passed the 400-yard mark in 4:46.3, 400 meters in 5:10.9, and 440 yards in 5:12.6. The former marks for the last three distances, set by Norris Hoyt, of Yale University in 1936, were 4:58.9, 5:25.8 and 5:27.8.

Jack Kasley, another member of Michigan's champions, won a 100-yard breast stroke exhibition race in 1 minute 10.1 seconds, a tenth of a second slower than the American record.

Pompoon Is Favorite In Jamaica's Feature

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—Facing nine high-class experienced rivals, J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon embarks tomorrow on a campaign designed to make or break him as an outstanding Kentucky Derby eligible.

The son of Pompey, one of three leading choices for the Derby as the result of winning the 1936 juvenile championship, has been named for the six furlongs of the $7,500 Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica. This is the opening feature of what turf experts predict will be New York's most successful racing season since liberalizing of the betting law three years ago. A crowd of 15,000 is expected.

No outstanding 3-year-old was ever asked to meet a more exacting task so early in the season. If Pompoon runs as well as Trainer Danny Clarke expects, win or lose, the Louchheim ace will be pointed for the mile and 70 yards of the $20,000 Wood Memorial, scheduled May 1, one week before the Derby.

His final prep yesterday was six furlongs in the fast time of 1:12 3-5. For his 1937 debut, Pompoon has been asked to pick up 116 pounds and give weight by scale to several of the country's fleetest sprinters, including two former winners of the stake and a world record holder.

The Wheatley stable's Snark, which ran six and a half furlongs in 1:15 4-5 for a new world mark at Hialeah Park this winter, actually has been assigned top weight for 4-year-olds.

Marshall Field's Tintagel, which like Pompoon won the Belmont futurity as a 2-year-old, figures to make it a three-horse race for main honors. Tintagel, highly regarded for last year's Derby until he showed himself to be only a sprinter, has been alloted 120 pounds.

Win at Squash.

The District A. A. U. squash semi-finals last night found Chester T. Lane and E. B. Brownell victorious and matched for a championship match this coming Friday at the Y. M. C. A. Lane defeated A. C. Minnix, 15—9, 15—10, 13—15, 15—8, while Brownell defeated Hugh Lynch, 15—11, 9—15, 15—6, 18—15.

Griffs Win Contest On Four Base Hits

(Pictures on Page 23.)

By Shirley Povich.

Manager Bucky Harris unveiled his 1937 edition of the Washington Ball Club to 1,000 rain-drenched fans yesterday and then he introduced the Boston Bees to Ed Linke.

The big, red-faced pitcher who had compiled the incredible batting average of .800 in the Southern training games, appeared at the plate against the Bees in the ninth inning of a 1-1 ball game and tarried just long enough to thump a two-base hit to center field and win it, 2-1.

It was the fifth hit by Linke in six appearances at the plate this season and Jess Hill, on second base, leisurely trotted home with the run that won the ball game.

All the figures except the final score were in favor of the Bees, who made nine hits off the combined pitching efforts of Joe Cascarella and Linke. The Nats performed the feat of winning the game on only four hits served up by a pair of rookies, Jim Turner and the left-handed Weir.

Linke had been something of a hero back there in the inning before his batting heroics when he struck out two Bees in a row with two on base and none out.

Daring base running set the stage for the Nats to tie the game in the ninth and win it in the tenth. The Bees still boasted a 1-0 lead in the ninth and the Nats had only two hits to show for their efforts against the pair of Boston rookies, when Joe Kuhel coaxed a base on balls out of young Weir in the ninth.

With Fred Sington at bat, Kuhel violated all the rules of orthodox baseball when he attempted to steal second. But he got away with it and the Nats had the tying run on second with none out. Sington left Kuhel there with a weak pop to Third Baseman Garms, but Johnny Stone nearly tore the glove from Second Baseman Cuccinello's hand with a hot single into center and Kuhel scored the tying run.

Big Shanty Hogan was a party to the Nats' victory in the tenth. He lashed a hot drive down the third base line that skidded through Garms' glove for an error. Manager Harris inserted the fleet Hill to run for Hogan and Hill after several feints finally stole second.

But it was wasted effort by Hill. He could have scored from first on Linke's decisive wallop that followed.

The Nats were a pathetic bunch at bat until the last two innings. Jim Turner, a winner with Indianapolis last year, held 'em to two hits for six innings, both off the bat of Joe Kuhel. The only Nat to reach second base for eight innings advanced there on an error.

Joe Cascarella, serving his slow stuff to the plate, shut the Bees out until the seventh when three successive singles capped by Vince DiMaggio's drive into leftfield pushed a run across the plate.

Weaver to Pitch Against Bees Today

The rejuvenated Monte Weaver, whose impressive pitching in the South was a highlight of the Nats' training campaign, is Manager Bucky Harris' mound selection for today's battle with the Bees at Griffith Stadium.

Weaver, who may possibly be given the opening-day pitching assignment, will hurl the full nine innings for the Nats.

Washington Club officials announced that, despite threatening weather, the game will be staged if there is no rain at game time, 3 o'clock.

Outfielder Al Simmons, virtually recovered from an attack of influenza, will remain out of the Nats' line-up until tomorrow. He is certain to play in the opening game, according to Manager Harris.

Apostoli Wins Bloody Battle From Krieger

By the United Press.

New York, April 14.—Young Freddie Apostoli, San Francisco middleweight, tonight won a technical knockout victory over Solly Krieger, of New York, when Referee Jack O'Sullivan halted their scheduled 12-round bout before Solly, suffering a severely gashed lip, came out for the sixth round.

Krieger, who had dropped a 10-round decision in the same ring to the former California bellboy less than two months ago, had his lower lip opened in the fourth round. He was a bloody mess in the fifth and between rounds Dr. William Walker advised the referee to stop the battle. Apostoli was declared the winner by a technical knockout in the fifth round because the bell hadn't yet rung for the sixth.

Krieger's lip was split by a sharp left with about a minute and a half to go in the fourth round. By the end of the round he—and Freddie—were covered with blood. The doctor looked at Solly's lip before he went out for the sixth and decided he should continue.

Apostoli, who had won the first, second and fourth rounds with lightning-like southpaw jabs, flicked home a swift one as they reached mid-ring and Solly's lip began to spurt blood again. Every time Freddie landed, blood spattered over both fighters, the referee and even into the second and third rows of the ringside. Near the end of the fifth round, even Solly's friends among the crowd of 4,000 begged O'Sullivan to halt the slaughter.

So bloody were the pair by the middle of the fifth, that no one noticed that Apostoli's right eye had been severely gashed with one of Kreiger's wild rights.

Riddle Farm 'Derby' Hope Sets Record

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md, April 14.—The Glen Riddle Farm's War Admiral qualified impressively for the approaching Kentucky Derby by turning in a brilliant race and a fine workout all in the same motion. Matched by a field of five sprinters which included Airflame, a Derby hope of A. G. Vanderbilt, War Admiral completed the 6 furlongs in the best time recorded in Maryland this spring for the distance, being clocked in 1:11 2-5. After being taken in hand in the closing stages, War Admiral went on to work out a mile and was timed in 1:40 2-5.

The race was the Calvert Purse and War Admiral thrilled a crowd of 10,000 with his performance. Looking like a picture horse in the parade to the post, the son of Man o' War was first out of the starting gate. Airflame also broke fast and attempted to run with the ultimate winner.

Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, heading for his third victory on the program, asked War Admiral for speed and the colt responded by opening a gap on Airflame, apparently without effort. As the field swung into the stretch, Clingendaal moved up menacingly but War Admiral again spurted and with a good advantage at the sixteenth pole, Kurtsinger began taking up.

War Admiral was making his first start of the year and was backed into favoritism, paying a $3.50 mutuel.

For the first time since the suspension of Trainer Bert Michell, the Denemark Stable came through with a winner in the first race. Radio Charm, a fleet son of Jean Lafitte, bounded to the finish line three parts of a length in advance of Bunny Baby, with Brown Moth third in the field of 11. Radio Charm, paying a $10.60 mutuel, was handled by Charlie Kurtsinger, contract rider of the Denemark Stable, who has been resting since his Florida campaign. Radio Charm went to the front at the break and was being rated along in the stretch. He ran the 4½ furlongs in 0:55 2-5.

Kurtsinger came right back to ride the day's second winner and make a personal victory of the $198.90 daily double. He pounded High Velocity, owned by H. P. Metcalf, to the wire a head in front of A. G. Vanderbilt's Leap. Five lengths back of that pair came Melodiana, to take third money from Broadkill, the favorite, after the judges had consulted the negative. High Velocity came from far back. He paid a $30.90 mutuel and registered the time of 1:14 1-5.

Disregarding top weight of 126 pounds, Townsend B. Martin's White Cockade came from far back to put on a stretch drive that defeated J. P. Jones' Deflate by a length in a 6-furlong sprint that was the third race. Sir Quest, with Kurtsinger seeking his third straight winner, was third. Westrope took back on White Cockade at the break and held the gelding under wraps until reaching the stretch. Asked for a drive, White Cockade come up with leaps and bounds, to win going away. The winner was a $4.30 favorite and was clocked in 1:12 3-5.

Taking Bill Bennings' Column Literally — By DeMoreland

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike arrived today. I had received a tip that he came to Washington in the Nats' bat bag but it seems that everybody guessed wrong about Mike, if we take his word for it. He says he worked his way up to Baltimore on a fruit boat. He told me that it was his heart that brought him to me, but if the truth were known Mike probably spells heart like this: a-p-p-e-t-i-t-e. I told him to forget that system of his and try to regain some of his waning prestige. He has resolved to return to his old job of clocker exclusively and he will not try to expert any more. I told him that I would pass along his occasional good thing to his friends. Mike says that the sun shall not rise in the future unless he and his watch are on the rail. I believe I'll get up early tomorrow and see him swing into action. A Benningite writes: You are right about that camera-finish stuff. I saw one of those outside horse pictures and the horse nearest the camera had a head and neck like a prehistoric anteater. In order to get a winner in a close finish we have to win two bets. First we have to get the horse close enough to get in the picture and, second, we have to gamble on what the picture will show. It's that sort of thing that makes me take a bottle to the track.

BILL.

First race—Golden Vein is well bred for this sort of race track. Gets a 10-pound shift in weights off that last meeting with Acautaw. The latter looms as the one to beat. Moon Harvest, if ready, could take it all. Happy Hostess is a threat.

Second race—Masked Gal should come sailing home in this field. Turned in a promising effort Tuesday and did not get any the best of racing luck. Playnot graduated from the maiden ranks at Bowie and is dangerous. Flying Feet for the show.

Third race—My Surprise drops down in cheap company and may take the measure of Little Argo, one that won three races at Bowie. Our Crest is a threat. Mondorf and Ipso Facto gets in light and may have something to say about the purse distribution.

Fourth race—Miss Oak is working well since her win at the other track and may be capable of downing these. Goes coupled with Yomer as the J. P. Jones entry. Way Out is said to be a good one and may be dangerous. Singing Slave to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Brush Handle and Prairie Prince are a close fit here. the former had trouble last out and I look for a better ride. Joan Asbestos has some races that would account for the purse in this field.

Seventh race—Throw out Play Book's recent race. That was the conditioner needed. Departed and Top High should gain the other money places.

Best bet—Brush Handle.

Middleburg Feature Won By Fugitive

By Grace Brooks.
A Staff Correspondent.

Middleburg, Va., April 14.—Fugitive, aged chestnut gelding belonging to Mrs. G. H. Bostwick, easily captured the Glenwood, 3-mile timber race and feature of the program of the closing day of the spring race meet of the Middleburg Racing Association on the Glenwood course.

Three thousand spectators were kept wrapped in raincoats by intermittent April showers, but the weather was mild and the racing the best ever seen on the Glenwood course.

Fugitive, ably ridden by Mike Kerr, broke away in the lead at the barrier and set a pace so fast that the remaining field of three good steeplechasers could not match it, clipping 4 seconds off last year's time and finishing in 5 minutes 32 2-5 seconds.

The position at the finish was identical with that throughout the race Lassitude II, owned by Col. Torr, and ridden by R. G. Woolfe, ran second by about 15 lengths.

Northwood Stable's 6-year-old brown gelding, Pimochio, ran a good race and was not far behind Lassitude's heels at the finish. Mrs. Gould's aged Ostend, with Bill Street riding, finished far in the rear.

The Panther Skin, a 2½-mile brush race, provided the big thrill of the afternoon and was one of the best races ever seen here. Mrs. Marion T. Gibson's Little Cottage was the first away from the barrier and kept the lead over the fourth when Flying Pilgrim fell. Saughton Boy kept fourth place until the last two jumps when he came to the front. He took the lead over the last jump, and closely pursued by Mrs. Turner Wiltshire's The Scamp, came in one length ahead, with Little Cottage capturing third place.

The Little River, a 2-mile brush race, was won by Northwood Stable's Omel, ridden by R. Hayhurst.

Guckeyson Learns How to Toss Javelin by Movies.

A 3-foot strip of 35-mm. movie film is being used by Bill Guckeyson, of Maryland, to improve his javelin throwing this spring, with gratifying results, and if the experiment is successful "Swede" Eppley, the Terps' coach, may extend it to other branches of the game.

Made by Hugh Miller, chief of The Post's photographic staff, in a search for rotogravure material, the film depicts "Gike" in two spear-throwing acts, one of which results in a foul as he steps over the circle. His form, incidentally, is grace personified.

A movie projector presented to him at Christmas years ago is used by Guckeyson in his search for flaws, one that revealed a glaring defect in delivery the first time he saw the film. The boy thinks his work in this line will be helped immeasurably by studying the celluloid, and hopes to attain his best form which once found him getting better than 200 feet.

Magnates Bid High For Youthful 'Star'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—In a vital decision, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Commissioner of Baseball, today ripped the lid off the alleged practice of major league clubs in "covering up" promising young stars to block their entry into the big leagues through the selective draft.

Commissioner Landis settled the case involving Tommy Henrich, strapping 22-year-old outfielder, now with the Milwaukee Club of the American Association, by declaring him a free agent, thus depriving the Cleveland Indians of a claim to him. Henrich, rated as a potential $15,000 ballplayer, is now eligible to sign with any major league club which may desire his services.

The bidding, expected to start immediately, promises to be brisk with a half-dozen clubs seeking Henrich.

Henrich, a terrific hitting left-hander, who batted .346 with New Orleans last year, had appealed to Commissioner Landis to investigate his status, charging that the Indians had shunted him from farm to farm, thus preventing his advancement to the major leagues.

Commissioner Landis' investigation disclosed that the Cleveland club was guilty of covering Henrich up and that his transfer from New Orleans to Milwaukee was made at the direction of Cleveland officials. Henrich had played with Zanesville, Ohio, and New Orleans, both Cleveland farms, and was then sent to Milwaukee, joining the Brewers this spring after his purchase last fall with Pitcher Ralph Winegarner, for $7,500.

Henrich never played with Milwaukee except in spring exhibition games in which he batted and fielded sensationally. His home is in Massilon, Ohio.

Commissioner Landis' ruling, which set a new record for him for brevity, follows:

"Investigation of the status of the player, instigated at his own request, discloses that he has been 'covered up' for the benefit of the Cleveland Club and that his transfer from New Orleans to Milwaukee, was directed by the Cleveland Club and prevented his advancement to a major league club under the selection clause. Because of the violation of the player's rights under his contract and the major-minor rules, he is hereby declared a free agent."

Neither Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians, nor his executive assistant, C. C. Slapnicka, attended today's hearing, but Allan Sothoron, manager of the Milwaukee Club, President Henry Bendinger, and business Manager Louis Nahin were called. They expressed disappointment in losing Henrich, whom they regarded as a sensational prospect.

Bradley and Slapnicka were quoted as saying they would take no action to regain Henrich's services. Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants, however, was declared to be in the market for Henrich and might be willing to bid $20,000 for him.

Nats Want Henrich? No, Says Griffith.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, declared last night he would not enter the bidding for Outfielder Tommy Henrich, declared a free agent yesterday by Baseball Commissioner Kensaw M. Landis.

"Those rich clubs in both leagues have gone crazy in bidding for Henrich," said Griffith. "I see by the papers that Manager Bill Terry of the Giants said he would offer $20,000 for the fellow, and the Red Sox and Yankees are probably prepared to beat that figure. We can't compete with them.

"At any such price, the Washington Club isn't interested. Those other teams may have some kind of a line on Henrich, but we haven't scouted him. I can't pay that kind of money for a fellow I know nothing about.

"Besides, he's a left-handed hitter, and we don't need that kind, I want to say, though, that everything I've heard about Henrich has been flattering. He may be a good buy at any price up to $30,000."

Baxter Faces Davis in Mat Bout Tonight

Mahomet will go to the mountain in a charming little allegory, with the accent on "gory," at Turner's Arena tonight.

Mahomet will be portrayed by Laverne Baxter, an outstanding thespian.

The mountain will be represented by ponderous Willie Davis, one of the ablest emoters that ever trod the boards, or rather mats, if you must get technical.

Baxter's specialty in these little playlets which are sometimes facetiously dubbed "wrestling matches" has been the portrayal of villainy. Not the smooth, suave type of villainy now the vogue in the theater and on the screen, but leering roisterous villainy of the Gay Nineties class.

Davis too has alway portrayed the baser type, but his villainy has been of the large, stumbling good-natured variety.

In the semifinal, scheduled for 30 minutes, Cliff Olsen will return to the local wars. For some time Cliff laid claim to the heavyweight wrestling championship simply because Yvon Robert fell down and broke his leg while working against him. Olsen will grapple with Hank Barber.

Ted Key, former U. C. L. A. football player, will meet Stanley Pinto. Mike Mazurki will engage Marshall Blackstock, and Bill Sledge will have it out with Jim Coffield in other 30-minute time-limit affairs.

Colonials Subdue Delaware Nine, 7-4, With 3-Run Rally in 7th

Losers Get 9 Safeties Off Lanier

DeAngelis and Stapleton Lead G. W.'s Attack in Third Victory.

George Washington found refuge in the Delaware yesterday. This time it was the Delaware University nine, and the Colonials won their third victory of the season, 7 to 4, on the Ellipse.

It was behind the nine-hit twirling of Bill Lanier, finishing his second game of the season, and with a 3-run rally in the seventh, that they halted their losing streak.

The visitors assumed an early lead in the second when rain prevented Lanier from hitting his stride, but G. W. came back in its half to tie the score. It remained tied through the fifth inning.

The Delaware nine went ahead, 4 to 2, in the sixth when Hickman, Roberts and Reed singled, coupled with a walk to McCord. Lanier tightened at this point and retired the side without further damage.

The Colonials won the game in the seventh. Williams started things off with a single and Lanier furthered his cause with a single to left. Zelaska flied out, Williams scoring and Lanier crossed the plate on Berg's rousing triple to right-field. DeAngelis singled, scoring Berg with the third run of the inning.

Vince D. Angelis was the star at bat for the winners, cracking out a triple and two singles, while Stapleton specialized in extra bases with a two and a three-bagger in four trips to the plate.

Three potential G. W. runs were cut off at the plate at various times by the rifle pegs of the Delaware gardeners. Jackson went the route for the visitors, allowing 12 hits. Lanier fanned four for G. W.

Georgetown Nine Routs Loyola By 13-4 Score

Climaxing an attack as steady as the drizzle they played in with an eight-run outburst in the fifth inning, Georgetown's hard-hitting Hoyas ground out a 13-4 victory over Loyola yesterday in a game halted by rain at the end of the sixth inning. It was their third consecutive victory.

With Hank Bertrand heaving 'em up in steady style, Georgetown experienced no real difficulty with the Baltimoreans, assuming an early lead which ultimately proved to be more than sufficient. Bertrand limited the opposition to four hits and struck out five.

The Hoyas took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Nolan and Cavadine, with Donohue's error on Bassin's ground ball sandwiched in between. They made it 3-0 in the second, which Nolan opened with another single and "Smitty" Nau overmatched with his second home-run of the campaign.

Linke Named Number 1 Nat Pinch Hitter

Chunky Ed Linke has slugged himself into the Nats' No. 1 pinch-hitting role, Manager Bucky Harris announced yesterday

Harris' decision was not influenced particularly by the big pitcher's game-winning two-bagger in the tenth inning yesterday, the Nats' manager declared.

"But I'd be a fool to overlook him as a pinch hitter," Harris said. "Ed's a natural hitter, even if pitchers aren't supposed to hit. It isn't the first time a club has come up with a pinch-hitting pitcher. Look at Charley Ruffing, of the Yankees; Wes Ferrell, and Johnny Marcum, of the Red Sox, and George Uhle, of the Indians.

"I wouldn't bet any of those fellows would outhit Linke over a season's play and none of 'em will hit the ball any farther. Those five hits Linke has made in six times up this season are no myth.

"They're going to shoot plenty of left-handed pitchers at this Washington Club this season, and Linke will see plenty of action up there pinch hitting. He looks like my best bet."

Frank also scored in the pole vault for his third victory. Guckeyson out tossed the field in both the discus and shot put for his 10 points.

The Lexingtonians held the Old Liners even in the track events, but were unable to annex a first place in the field tests.

Lelanders Beat Devitt Prep, 6 to 4

Bethesda-Chevy Chase defeated the Devitt Prep tossers, 6-4, yesterday in a five-inning game that was halted by a downpour of rain. After waiting quite a while, the umpire decided that the grounds were too wet to resume play.

The Prep boys were away to an early lead, scoring four runs in the first two innings on the clouting of Pritchett, Clark and Botten. With Vannais, Schneider, MacLeod and Day pounding triples to the far corners of the lot, the Lelanders came back to score six runs in the last three frames for the victory.

W. & L. High's Strategy Wins Over Eastern

After ordering three consecutive intentional outs in order to complete the game before a shower washed out his team's seventh-inning lead and victory, Coach Richardson's Washington-Lee High nine defeated Eastern yesterday, 5 to 2, at Eastern.

The Virginians went into the seventh trailing, 2 to 1. Sprinkle doubled, Anderson singled, Milstead walked and successive triples by Dansberger and Morris scored four runs, with none out.

Umpire Lund ordered the hosts at bat in their half of the seventh and pitcher Cost fanned two and forced the other to ground out. The game was called on account of rain at this point, netting the Ballstoners their fifth straight victory of the season.

The Easterners took a 2-to-0 lead in the third on Kidwell's walk and doubles by Jacobs and De Julian, but that terminated their scoring threats and the young Little General twirler set them down without a hit the remainder of the game, fanning seven. Sprinkle collected three hits for the winners.

Law Means Trade Gain Of $100,000

Alleys to Be Open From 2 P. M. to Midnight Under Measure.

Washington's ban on Sunday bowling—in effect since 1902—was repealed yesterday with the signature by President Roosevelt of a bill that will permit alleys to operate on the Sabbath from 2 p. m. to midnight.

Within a few hours of the President's signing of the bill, the Washington Alley Operators' Association, an organization of the principal bowling alley owners, decided at a meeting to take advantage of the new law by opening for business Sunday.

An operator of one of the largest bowling places in the city last night estimated adoption of the law will bring more than $100,000 a year in new business to alley proprietors.

Closed With Barrooms.

Bowling alleys were closed on Sundays by the same law that closed Capital barrooms. It was passed as a rider to the appropriation bill of 1902.

With the coming of prohibition, bowling and legal drinking were divorced and the old combination bowling alley and bar passed out of existence in the Capital. During the prohibition era and since repeal, bowling became a game for women as well as men.

"It was largely because we wanted to remove he old barroom sigma from bowling that we wanted this bill," a spokesman for the operators said. "The financial interest was secondary."

Washington, it was estimated, has more than 50,000 bowlers. Of this number, 20,000 are organized into 168 men's and 34 women's leagues.

Many of these, it was pointed out, were prevented by employment from bowling at any time other than Saturday afternoon and Sunday. On Sunday they patronized alleys in Baltimore and other nearby Maryland towns where special events and tournaments were organized.

With removal of the ban, local operators made immediate efforts to bring the business back to the Capital.

Lost Court Fight.

Alley operators here have fought for many years to lift the ban. Their first efforts were in the courts and this phase of the battle ended with the courts upholding the law and the operators paying fines for violation.

In the last two years the battle has centered on Capitol Hill. The bill was introduced at the close of the Seventy-third Congress as a rider to the racetrack bill, which was defeated.

In the present Congress the measure was maneuvered through the House in a few weeks by former Senator Gore, of Oklahoma.

Marty Gallagher Needs Spar Mates

Marty Gallagher, the Foggy Bottom flailer, sent out a call for sparring partners yesterday. Martin, it seems, is experiencing difficulty in securing animated punching bags to put him in shape for his bout against Sandy McDonald at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Two of Marty's sparmates staged a sit-down strike on him yesterday after he had battered them about no end. The Foggy Bottom pride is training at Griffith Farms, the outdoor establishment of his manager, Tom O'Donnell. Anyone desiring to be punched in the nose may make application for one of the vacancies there.

In a six-round preliminary to the Gallagher-McDonald fuss, Vincent Serica, of New York, will engage Al Lowman, of Baltimore. Serica has won his last five fights by knockouts. The winner will be matched with Charles (Hobo) Williams, local middleweight prospect.

London Bout to Open Baer Comeback Today

15,000 (in Dinner Jackets) to See Fight; Baer 2-1 Choice to Flatten British Titlist; Sarron in a Preliminary Bout.

By the United Press.

London, April 14.—Maxie Baer will open another comeback campaign in Harringay Arena tomorrow night against clumsy Tommy Farr, a 23-year-old Welshman.

The distance is 12 rounds—but the betting men are laying 2 to 1 that Farr, holder of the British Empire heavyweight crown, does not answer the bell for the fifth round. Odds on Maxie winning, strangely, are only 3 to 1, with few takers.

Max intends to put Tommy to sleep as quickly as possible; polish off Walter Neusel, of Germany, here on May 31 and then climb into a London ring July 31 against Joe Louis.

A capacity crowd of 15,000 is expected to pack the North London Stadium for the scrap—one of the largest and "ritziest" gatherings in English pugilistic history. Ringside seats were available today from scalpers for $52.50 and because an elite crowd will attend, reporters received a gentle hint that they would be out of place if they wore anything but dinner jackets.

Max has been guaranteed $22,500, free from income tax, win, lose or draw. Farr will get between $10,000 and $17,500, depending on whether the gate reaches $100,000. When he won the British empire title last month from Ben Foord, Tommy, a former bootblack, received only $3,750.

One of the preliminaries will feature Petey Sarron of Birmingham, Ala., recognized by the National Boxing Association of America as world featherweight champion. Petey's title will not be at stake in a 10-rounder with Harry Mizler, former empire featherweight king. Sarron is a heavy favorite.

Baer expects to scale 212 while Farr will check in a around 200. There will be no formal weigh-in ceremony but they will mount the scales a few minutes before they enter the ring. The battle starts 9:15 Greenwich time (4:15 E. S. T.).

On paper, the match is a set-up for the bronzed Californian who gave Madison Square Garden process servers a merry chase when he left for London last month. Farr is a poor boxer, and has a "powder puff" punch.

New York—The heavyweight fight in London tomorrow between Max Baer and Tommy Farr will be broadcast in this country over C. B. S. at 4:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time.)

Fight Injunction Delayed by Judge

Newark, N. J., April 14 (AP).—Federal Judge Guy L. Fake, somewhat confused by the legalistis highjinks of the fight world, deferred judgment tonight on Madison Square Garden's request for an injunction against the Jim Braddock-Joe Louis fight.

Constantly interupting counsel to inquire which of the many contracts between Braddock and the Garden the lawyers were talking about, the judge finally directed them to submit final briefs within a week. No temporary injunction was granted in the meantime.

The main point of contention, and the point over which they wrangled for three and a half hours, was the studying of the three verbose contracts which Braddock has with the Garden.

Steel Output Holds Despite Drop in Orders

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—New steel business has declined the past week, following heavy tonnages ordered in March Iron Age said today in the weekly review of the industry. At the same time the trade journal reported "pronounced weakness" in steel scrap markets after the recent sensational rise.

Production, however, shows no letdown from an estimated 91 per cent of capacity, the publication said, adding that minor declines in output in some districts were offset by increases in others.

"While raw material is advancing in price," the publication stated, "steel scrap, which has had a phenomenal advance, shows pronounced weakness in nearly all centers. The declines of a week ago brought out a large volume of scrap that presumably was being held for higher prices, with the result that both brokers and consumers have reduced their offering quotations or withdrawn from the market. The Iron Age scrap composite has declined to $21.42, the first downward revision since November.

"Whether the decline in prices of nonferrous metals and iron and steel scrap has had an effect upon sentiment among steel buyers is not easily discernable, but there is undoubtedly an easing of pressure on mills, particularly in the matter of getting third-quarter orders on the books.

"Steel companies have made no official statements regarding the Supreme Court decision on the Wagner labor act, but independent companies, which are now conferring with the steel workers organizing committee, are studying it closely in view of the fact that this union is reported to have enrolled less than a majority of workers in leading plants."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance Moderately on Favorable Earnings; U. S. Bonds Improve.

New York, April 14.—Nearly every branch of financial markets improved. Turnover in stocks was smaller at around 1,500,000 shares, and the best prices were not held through the last hour, but moderate gains were the rule. Government bonds strengthened and commodities moved up a little on the wave of better feeling. Foreign currencies were steady, including the French franc. July wheat rose half a cent a bushel to 124½ cents.

The sweeping nature of the recovery in bond prices and registering of an important public utility issue suggested that before long the business of new financing may again be in full swing, although the rise in bond yields has lost the market for refunding in many instances. As for Government bonds, the firmer tone there has brought out the prediction in some quarters that banks and insurance companies, frightened out of all activity up to a few days ago, may regain control and accumulate enough to send the rally a good deal further.

General Improvement.

Nearly all sections of stocks improved. Price fluctuations for the most part were narrow, but little attempt was made to change the direction. Steel and metals turned favorites, helped by revelation of high operating rates, greatly increased profits and more lively expectations of dividends. Steel and Bethlehem opened a point or more higher. Anaconda led the coppers. Railroad equipment shares found buyers and rose 1 to 2 points.

Even the public utilities found a larger following. Water Works was active. Some of the utility preferred issues climbed 1 to 3 points. Rails took on fractional increases in price, although Pennsylvania receded, possibly on news of further heavy expenditures for electrification account. In the final trading hour the oil stocks dominated. Several sold at new high levels. Motor shares were neglected, but airplanes had their best day in a long time.

Currency Values.

Coming shortly after the reassurances by President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau on the gold price, the markets were inclined to take the British Chancellor of the Exchequer at his word when he said Britain also had no plan for cutting the gold price. Mr. Chamberlain's notice that the countries in the foreign exchange stabilization agreement had made no contract on value of their respective currencies came as no surprise. That point was made clear by our Treasury at the time the so-called three-party agreement was announced.

What the parties at interest apparently intended was to prevent wide swings in currencies in a period during which the effect on prices at home and on foregn trade would be studied with respect to the currency values then prevailing. It has since turned out that the franc was too highly regarded, and if the flow of gold and funds this way is to be stopped it doubtless also will have to be admitted that the dollar is too high vis-a-vis sterling. However, it will require a major quake to bring the administration to let the dollar rise enough to threaten the prevailing high prices for farm products.

Active Trade.

Midweek industrial news was mostly favorable. The Department of Agriculture published its cotton consumption report for March and it showed the greatest consumption on record. That increased buying of cotton must be set down in part to the general expectation, amounting almost to a nervous condition, that prices are going to rise considerably. Cotton used last month was 779,302 bales, a jump of 40 per cent over a year ago. Cotton exports also increased, the total of 467,706 bales being more than 15 per cent above last year, which foreshadows a gain in total export trade for the country last month.

Other midweek reports included an estimate of railway freight car loadings for last week, which apparently fell under the previous week, but were 14.5 per cent greater than for the corresponding period of a year ago. That was about the gain also in electrical production. The steel industry, according to the Iron Age, while suffering some decline in new business in the last week, shows no letdown in operations and "mills have little, if any, steel to sell for second quarter." The same journal notes an "extraordinary" volume of orders in March, which make some rest natural. Meanwhile, coke prices are hardening, but steel scrap and pig iron are weakening, the whole making for less apprehension among consumers and suggesting that perhaps the steel industry, as usual, reached a peak in March.

No Fear of Economy.

Any decline which may come within the next few months is more likely to be a natural letdown from the fast pace of the early months of the year, while prices are losing their fear inflation and consumers are recovering their balance. The usual picture is one of great activity in the spring, some recession in summer, and a fresh pickup in the autumn. So far as the President's hint that, because of the mounting Government deficit, economy must henceforth be the watchword at Washington, Wall Street's response to that was a handicap for the sentiment involved and a cheer made famous by the citizens dwelling north of the Harlem River for the chances of its being carried out. Business needn't fear much early reduction in Government spending, unfortunately for taxpayers.

Dollars From Cotton.

It is assumed that the Commodity Credit Corporation must be getting some money out of its cotton, for it has turned into the Treasury since the middle of March about $30,000,000 more than it has taken out. Students of Treasury figures feel that the RFC could gather in more dollars if its management was disposed to turn on a little heat. The RFC has been doing fairly well on collections until recently.

Tobacco Companies.

Tobacco company sales figures, as published today, after a long time of disinclination to make them public, for trade reasons, will prove to be of considerable help to investors. The final decision of the SEC to publish them is a good thing, and it demolishes one more bar to frequent, prompt and full reports to which investors are entitled. Another nail is driven into the coffin of the old theory that what is good for the director is not necessarily good for the stockholder. The reports show that American Tobacco Co. carried 15.2 per cent of its sales to operating profit. The next highest ratio was 11.6, for R. J. Reynolds, which incidentally turned in the top sales volume. The Liggett & Myers operating ratio was a little under 9 per cent and that for Lorillard was 6.7 per cent.

Pepper.

1937 Sugar Trading Tops All Last Year

New York, April 14.—Trading in sugar futures on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange yesterday reached a figure for the year to date in excess of trading during the whole year of 1936, when 2,827,750 tons were done. The inauguration of trading on January 4 this year in the No. 4 or "world" contract has more than doubled the volume of trading. Membership values have increased this year from $3,400 to $6,400.

Business Index At 100% First Time Since '29

New York, April 14.—Staging a remarkable reversal of the downward trend that had prevailed in January and February, the national business index in March made the impressive gain of 7 per cent and for the first time since 1929 attained the normal business activity of 100 per cent, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research division of Brooke, Smith & French. One year ago, at the end of March, the index stood at 21 per cent below normal.

The last previous high reached by the national index since 1929 was 98 at the end of December, 1936. In January, 1937, it fell 4 points to 94, and there was a further decline of 1 point, to 93, in February. The slight fall in February, indicating that business was offering stubborn resistance to further recession, is now followed by a substantial and, in many respects, totally unexpected, upward surge.

Continuing, the report states: "Increases of individual market areas covered practically the entire country. Of the 147 areas, 111 rose from 1 to 17 points. The largest gains were in areas where flood and strike conditions were settled. Twelve remained at February lovels. Only 24 lost ground and their declines were small."

Washington is one of the cities classified as normal or above in March.

New York, April 14 (AP).—March production of newsprint in North America set new high figures surpassing the previous record established last October, the News Print Service Bureau announced today.

Output for the United States and Canada totaled 383,686 tons, compared with 320,407 in March, 1936, an increase of 19.7 per cent. In October, 1936, production was 382,133. Production for March in the United States alone amounted to 82,576 tons, compared with 76,507 a year ago.

Cotton Consumption At All-Time High

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the domestic cotton industry established an all-time consumption peak in March by using 779,302 bales of lint.

The previous high month was June, 1933, with 697,261 bales consumed. Domestic cotton consumption this season will establish a 12-month record, officials said, if recent high activity is maintained.

Wheat Prices Buoyed Up by Dust Storms

Winds and Soil Blowing in Nebraska Also a Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—Dust storms in domestic crop territory west and southwest and also in Canada led to material upturns of Chicago wheat prices today. In particular, late reports of high winds and of soil blowing at many places in Nebraska were effective in hoisting wheat values. Unofficial estimates that Nebraska would not harvest more than 30,000,000 bushels of wheat this season, and perhaps much less, received special attention.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@¼ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 1.37⅝@1.37¾; July, 1.24⅜@1.24½; September, 1.21⅛@1.21¼; corn ⅞ lower to ⅝ higher; May, 1.26½@1.26⅞; July, 1.18⅜@1.18½; September, 1.07⅛@1.09⅛; oats, ⅝@1⅝ up; May, 50½@50⅝, and rye varying from ⅜ decline to 1 cent advance; May, 1.15⅜@1.15½. Provisions closed unchanged to 15 cents down.

Plane Is Designed For High Altitudes

Baltimore, April 14 (AP).—The Glenn L. Martin Co. announced today it had completed designs and tests for a "sub-stratosphere" plane to travel at 25,000 feet.

The new plane, called a "streamliner" at the Martin plant, "can be built now, whenever orders come to go ahead" Glenn L. Martin, president of the company, said. The plane would have an air-tight cabin. The air in it would be kept under pressure, so that the occupants would not suffer from the thin air found at 25,000 feet.

The transatlantic liners planned by the company cannot go above 23,000 feet. The "streamliner" would be able to rise to 30,000 feet and to cruise at 25,000.

Davis, 9 Others Recommended For Md. Parole

Commissioner Supports Former Town Clerk's Plea for Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 14.—Recommendation of a parole for Bryan Davis, former town clerk and treasurer of Takoma Park, from serving more than half of his sentence for embezzlement of town funds was sent to Gov. Harry W. Nice today.

W. David Tilghman, jr., State parole commissioner, also recommended freedom for nine other inmates of State penal institutions following hearings on their applications. He denied the requests of 15 prisoners.

Among those denied were applications of Harry Surasky, serving a ten-year term in connection with Maryland's only "kidnaping" case in recent years, and Leon Schmidt and John Wallace, serving sentences for murders.

Eugene, Dorsey, Negro, convicted in Carroll County in 1936 of receiving stolen goods and sentenced to 18 months in the House of Correction.

Robert W. Gibbs, convicted in Prince Georges County in 1936 of malicious destruction of property and sentenced to one year in the House of Correction.

Party Riots Cancel G. W. Debate With U. of Puerto Rico

Precautionary measures on the part of the host university because of political rioting caused cancellation of the George Washington University-University of Puerto Rico debate in the island territory, which was to have been held last month, Henry Roberts, assistant professor of public speaking at G. W., said last night.

He explained that althogh Puerto Rico was a quiet country, it now is troubled with a minor party which demands complete independence from the United States. These things Roberts and his party were told upon their arrival at San Juan.

Objections Voiced To Jobless Census

Objections to the proposed national census of unemployed were voiced Monday by Dr. Stuart A. Rice, chairman of the Central Statistical Board, who spoke before the Federal Community Chest Forum at the Harrington Hotel. John A. Lapp, newly-elected president of the forum, presided for the first time in his new capacity.

Dr. Rice declared that "unemployment is a negative thing." To take a census, he said, would imply taking a census of everybody, employed or unemployed, in order to determine the number of unemployed and the degree of employment of those now working.

He derided Gen. Johnson's criticism, which called the proposed census "cockeyed" and suggested self-registration instead. "I do not know of anything more cockeyed than this self-registration idea," Dr. Rice said.

Action Started To Curb Traffic In Marihuana

The Government moved yesterday to curb the traffic in marihuana, ancient drug, now smoked in cigarette form and claimed to reduce "people to idiocy or criminal insanity."

Stringent Federal regulation, through use of the Government's taxing powers, was proposed in the House yesterday by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, at the request of the Treasury Department.

"While the traffic in narcotics always has been restricted primarily to adults, marihuana is attacking children of high school age," said Doughton. "Too many instances could be recited of cases in which the mentality of young people has been permanently impaired, or they have been induced by the effects of the drug to commit crimes."

On the Air Today

For many months WOL has been picking up the Ad Club luncheons in New York City from the network. Yesterday the procedure was reversed—and Washington provided the Mutual net with half an hour of its Ad Club's weekly meeting from the studios of WOL. And not to be outdone in the least, in the way of celebrated persons for the broadcast, Norman Kal, president of the club, presented Postmaster General Farley, Gen. Hugh Johnson and Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.

The broadcast was in conjunction with the Washington Ad Club's salute to the new WOL although the station itself plans a coming-out party May 1, at which time its new studios and offices will be dressed in best bib and tucker for the many friends of Leroy Marks and the station.

Of course, Mr. Marks and Bill Dolph, the station's executive head, and Madeleine Ensign, the publicity boss, and everyone else was on hand yesterday noon looking very pleased and proud of the new layout. But the station's own party is yet to come.

Max Strahl Denies Swindling Charge

Max Strahl, 34, was unable to raise money to supply a $20,000 bond yesterday and was remanded to jail following a hearing in Police Court in connection with a $30,000 bond swindle. Strahl pleaded not guilty to the false representation charge when he was arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon on charges of obtaining the money from Mrs. Helen J. G. Reilly, Washington social figure.

Assistant District Attorney Arthur McLaughlin asked that the case be continued for two weeks to give the Government time to present the facts before the grand jury. It was learned, however, officials want more time in which to investigate Strahl's activities.

Detective Sergt. Chester Stepp seized Strahl in Mrs. Reilly's home, 1747 Q street northwest, Tuesday. Mrs. Reilly had lodged a complaint against Strahl, whom she knew only as "C. Decker," more than two months ago when he failed to return to her $15,000 worth of stocks and $15,000 worth of Oklahoma oil royalties which he promised to purchase for her.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Getting Out of One's Own Way.

There is only one correct philosophy for the defenders of a hand to follow—that is to keep the number of tricks needed to set the contract in one's mind as a fixed idea, and to shade all plays toward that end. This may sound like a platitude, but the fact remains that most players lose sight of the main objective in their battle over each individual trick. Consider the vision required to defeat the contract in today's hand.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Double	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the club King, cashed the Ace, and continued with the Queen, which declarer ruffed—The Ace and King of spades drew West's trumps, and then the nine of hearts was led toward dummy. West, instead of hastily ducking, gave thought to the situation. With two tricks home it was obvious that no more than one heart trick, if that many, could be won; therefore he would need a diamond trick to defeat the contract. What were the chances for such a trick?

Declarer's bidding had shown a good hand, because his partner's single raise directly over the take-out double had been a weak bid. Was it not very likely that declarer had both the Ace and Queen of diamonds. Declarer had already shown himself to have a six-card spade suit and two clubs. If the other five cards were three hearts and the A-Q of diamonds, it would be fatal for West to be put on lead on the third round of hearts since he would then have to lead a diamond up to declarer's major tenace.

With this thought in mind, West hesitated no longer over his play to the first heart lead—he put up the Jack. Dummy's Queen won, and declarer, sensing what was going on and to make things harder for West, returned to his hand with a trump and led another heart toward dummy. But West was alert to this maneuver. This time he put up the King, and now declarer was helpless. To let West hold this heart trick would simply incur a heart exit by West. Hoping that West had the ten of hearts as well, declarer played dummy's Ace, and led a third heart. But now East entered the fray with his valuable ten-spot, and returned a diamond through declarer. The latter had to take the finesse and, of course, it lost to West's King, which he had protected so carefully by his unblocking plays in hearts.

Child Health Day Plan Is Expanded

Scope of the work of the Child Health Day Committee, of which Dr. Ella Oppenheimer is chairman, is being expanded to take in every May Day activity which concerns children. Dr. Oppenheimer pointed out yesterday that care of child health embraces much more than immunization and vaccination against the various diseases of childhood and the medical care required by such ailments.

"The Playgrounds Department of the Public Schools, the settlements, the Boys' Clubs, the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. and all other organizations which build up boys and girls are contributing to the preservation of child health," Dr. Oppenheimer said.

"We expect to have competent committees, headed by leaders in their various fields of work, to coordinate all these various activities on Saturday May 1, and during the week following. As a matter of fact, we feel keenly that the prospective mother plays a large part in the future life of the unborn child and we hope to carry our activities through to Mother's Day with a special reference to prenatal and post-natal care of expectant mothers."

FHA Officer Here Returns to Post

H. H. Dearing, former director of the District of Columbia office, Federal Housing Administration, has resumed duties in that office, Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald announced yesterday.

Dearing, who has been with the Housing Administration since it was organized in August 1934, formerly was assistant to the deputy administrator in charge of title 1, of the national housing act, which became inoperative April 1.

After serving in the field, he was originally appointed director of the District office in May 1935. In December 1935, he was named assistant field director and in January, 1936, became assistant to the deputy administration, serving in that capacity until the present time.

U. S. Arrests 5 in Drive On Big Counterfeit Ring

New York, April 14 (AP).—Secret Service agents posed as City Park employes to smash what they termed a Nation-wide syndicate of counterfeit passers today.

Under arrest were five persons, four of whom the agents said were key members of a syndicate that has been a sore spot to the Secret Service for five years.

Reich Plane Finishes Flight With Crude Oil

Natal, Brazil, April 14 (AP).—The Lufthansa (German) plane, Zephyr, landed here today from Bathurst, Gambia, West Africa, on an experimental flight using crude oil instead of gasoline as fuel.

Members of the crew said the south Atlantic flight, made in 13 hours and 50 minutes, demonstrated fuel costs could be halved by using crude oil.

Man Asserts Girl Sought to Kidnap Him for Wedding

Philadelphia, April 14 (AP).—An altar-shy former suitor had his former girl friend and an alleged accomplice jailed here today on charges they attempted to kidnap him and spirit him to the Gretna Green at Elkton, Md., to say "I do."

He had no intention or desire to say "I do," said the plaintiff, Irving M. Ames, 39, of Newark, N. J., in lodging charges of violating the Lindbergh anti-kidnap law against Josephine Goldman, 29, of Newark, and Edward F. Marr, of White Plains, N. Y.

Miss Goldman is yet to be heard.

Pontiff Studies Reply To Reich Church Note

Vatican City, April 14 (AP).—Pope Pius pondered a reply tonight to Germany's note in a church and state dispute. The German note, delivered yesterday, replied to a message by the Pope to German Catholics March 21. He declared the 1933 concordat, aimed at pacifying German church-state relations, had been "rendered intrinsically valueless" and blamed the Nazi government.
